IN THE PAST 30 DAYS IN NORTHWEST BERGEN COUNTY

Mortgage rates dipped slightly — the average 30-year fixed mortgage rate recently ticked down to ~6.23% (from a high earlier this year). That shift has improved affordability a bit and helped stir renewed interest among buyers.

Buyer activity is rebounding as well. After a slower stretch, more buyers are returning to the market. With 111 homes sold recently and 26 average days on market, we're seeing movement pick up as inventory loosens and rates settle.

Prices in parts of NJ remain stable or rising. In fact, the median sales price is now $932,000, and sellers are still benefiting from strong demand — reflected in a 102% list-to-sold price percentage. For homeowners, this stability suggests winter could still be a strong window to list.

2026 may bring more balance to the market - We're seeing a decrease in closed sales from 2024 to 2025, which may open up more opportunities for buyers. For the savvy buyers, this shift could make it easier to finally secure the winning offer on their dream home.
