LISA WYNNE

Designing a Life that Fits
BY CHRIS MENEZES • PHOTOS BY MERNE JUDSON

When Lisa Wynne stepped into real estate in the fall of 2019, she wasn't just starting a new career—she was redesigning her life.

"I needed a career that allowed me to be in the pick-up line after school, at every soccer practice and game, and fully accessible to my son when he needed me," Lisa explains. "I also needed something I could pour myself into—something where the outcomes were entirely up to me."

That mix of family focus and personal drive has shaped every step of her journey. Lisa grew up in Arvada, Colorado, and studied journalism at Arizona State University before pivoting to business and marketing. After graduating, she moved to San Diego, where she would spend the next two decades, with a few years in Washington, D.C.

In the wake of September 11, 2001, she made a bold move: launching her own advertising firm at a time when most companies were cutting back. "It definitely wasn't the logical move," Lisa recalls with a laugh.

Within a few years, she had built a bi-coastal client roster that included NFL teams, fashion brands, and hospitality companies. She even won an Emmy for a Humane Society campaign she wrote pro bono. "That might have been the first time I fully understood how it felt to do something out of pure passion and not just for compensation," she says.

Running a successful company in two major cities gave her thick skin, humility, sharper instincts, and the kind of perseverance that only comes from building something from the ground up. "I've been working my entire life—and whether that was good, bad, or somewhere in between, it built the work ethic I bring to everything I do," Lisa says.

Real estate, of course, was a different industry, but the lessons translated: show up, trust instincts, and work hard—even when it's overwhelming. What surprised her most was how personal it became.

"From the joy of a first-time buyer getting their keys, to guiding a family through a tough transition, I've had the privilege of being trusted in moments that matter,” Lisa shares. “It’s incredibly rewarding—and humbling—to be part of those stories. The celebrations, the hardships, and everything in between... being invited into that space with my clients is something I will never take for granted.”

Standing out in a saturated market has been a challenge, but Lisa has leaned into her years of creating campaigns for others and poured that same creativity, strategy, and storytelling into her own business.

“It feels full circle,” she says. “I’m finally letting the creative side of me take the lead, and that’s been incredibly energizing. There’s no limit to how expansive I can be in building my business. That freedom is exciting—and it keeps me inspired to grow and evolve.”

For the past 16 years, Lisa’s focus has been on being a mom and building a life for her son, Ryder. Now that he’s 16 and starting to carve out his own independence, she’s rediscovering hers.

Much of her joy comes from time with her “little crew”—Ryder, her fiancé Nick, and her soon-to-be stepson, Nixon. “We’re building something really special as a family, and that’s where my heart is,” she says. Their calendar is packed with sports, from soccer to football, where they’re “proudly overly involved” cheering from the sidelines. And when they can, she and Nick make time for each other, even if it means sneaking in a Tuesday afternoon date.

These days, Lisa is learning to embrace life beyond “survival mode.” She hopes to travel more, create new memories, and spend time with the people who matter most. “I’m so fortunate to have some of the most amazing people in my life,” she says. “I’m looking forward to enjoying that time with them.”

Ask her what she hopes to be remembered for, and her answer reflects both humility and heart. “Honestly, I think it would be nice to be remembered at all,” she says with a smile. “But hopefully as a good mom, a loyal friend, someone people could trust and count on. If someone remembers me as the person who helped them through a big life transition with grace and clarity—that’s more than enough for me.”

For Lisa, real estate isn’t just a profession. It’s a way of designing a life that fits—one where family and career aren’t at odds, where creativity finds purpose, and where success is measured in the people who continue to trust her along the way.

Savannah Joyce

Substance Over Noise

Some agents chase visibility. Savannah Joyce chases something rarer: the kind of trust that lasts long after the closing table. “I didn’t just step into real estate. I stepped into people’s lives,” she says.

From the start, she’s understood that her work isn’t measured in transactions but in moments—the point where excitement, anxiety, and hope all converge, and someone decides to let her guide them through it. “People weren’t just handing me keys or paperwork,” she explains. “They were handing me their hopes, their next chapter, sometimes even their sense of stability. That’s what made me fall in love with real estate.”

That perspective comes from a lifetime of leading with service. Long before she was a top-producing agent, Savannah managed a high-end restaurant while attending Oklahoma State University, then built a successful career in marketing and sales. “I’ve always loved the art of the deal: the strategy, the negotiation, the momentum when you’re working toward something meaningful,” she shares. “But real estate brought a new layer to that passion. It wasn’t just about products or campaigns anymore—it was about people. Real people, real lives, real decisions.”

She approaches her work with the same level of intention she admired in brands like Nordstrom and the Ritz-Carlton. “There’s a predictability in the luxury of that kind of service, a sense of trust and consistency,” Savannah says. “That’s the level I’ve always aspired to deliver.”

It's an ethos that drives results. In 2023, her team closed over $93 million in volume, earning her No. 9 on the 2024 RealTrends list and No. 8 on 5280's Double Black Diamond list the year before. But to her, success is less about the scoreboard and more about the return call from a client years later, ready for their next chapter, or the referral of a close friend. "That's the highest compliment I can receive," she says. "It means I became part of their story."

Savannah has been with Compass for six years, joining as one of the first 50 agents when the brokerage launched in Colorado. She credits the company with helping her pair high-level innovation with hands-on service. "Compass gives me the ability to blend technology and tools with a deeply personal approach," she explains. From Private Exclusives that allow sellers to quietly test the market to Compass Concierge covering the cost of strategic upgrades until closing, the platform has given her new ways to elevate her clients' experience.

Today's Colorado market is full of opportunity, and Savannah thrives in that kind of environment. "Inventory is at the highest level we've seen in the last decade," she says. "For sellers, that's a chance to shine with the right positioning, pricing, and marketing. For buyers, it's more choices, more leverage, and more time to make the right move." Her role, as she sees it, is to cut through the noise so her clients can move forward with clarity and confidence.

When she's not working, Savannah and her husband, Brian, who works at Denver7, are all about enjoying their community. They hike, explore new restaurants, see concerts and theater, and lately, they've been testing EV bikes around the city. "We haven't bought them yet, but we've test-ridden enough to feel like part-time bike influencers," she says with a laugh. "Stay tuned—you might see us zipping through Denver like two overly enthusiastic tourists who forgot they actually live here."

Her advice for agents coming up in the industry is simple but pointed. "Focus less on looking successful and more on doing the work that builds trust," she says. "The top producers I respect most are students of the market and of people. They adapt, they learn, and they're never above the fundamentals."

Ask her what she wants to be remembered for, and she doesn't hesitate. "The quality of my work, the integrity of how I showed up, and the way I made people feel supported in moments that mattered," she says. Then she grins. "And if they also remember I could negotiate a contract while balancing a latte, a phone, and a set of house keys, that's just proof I was born for this."

In a business where the loudest voices often get the most attention, Savannah has built her career on something far more enduring. For her, the real win is knowing that when the dust settles, her clients remember the care, not the noise—and that's exactly how she plans to keep it.

People weren't just handing me keys or paperwork. They were handing me their hopes, their next chapter, sometimes even their sense of stability. That's what made me fall in love with real estate.”

Sam Sheets

MAKING THE CONNECTIONS

BY CHRIS MENEZES • PHOTOS BY MERNE JUDSON

For Sam Sheets, real estate is a people business—it's about connections. She thrives where the conversation is face to face. Where a handshake, a laugh, or a late-night text to a teammate keeps things moving forward. Whether she's hosting a client event, networking with fellow agents, or tapping into Compass's national network to help a buyer relocate; Sam is at her best when she's creating opportunities and making things happen.

That drive to connect is matched by a relentless work ethic. "I've always been a 'go above and beyond' kind of person," she says. "If I'm not out there working for my clients, networking to make new connections, marketing myself... I won't see the results I want." It's an approach that's earned her awards, built her reputation, and created a business sustained by genuine relationships.

Before stepping into real estate in December 2018, Sam was climbing the corporate sales ladder in Northern Colorado. She thrived in sales, problem-solving, and relationship-building, but something was missing. "Being behind a desk was not for me," she says. "I loved the sales and creating relationships with my customers, but I wanted to do it face to face. I wanted to be in an industry I could be passionate about."

Much of her inspiration comes from the strong women in her family. Sam's Aunt Barb has been a real estate agent in Minnesota for 39 years, and her mom, also an entrepreneur, started a graphic design business so she could work from home while raising Sam. That experience sparked Sam's own creative side and passion for marketing. Together, they showed her what it means to be driven, entrepreneurial, and connected to the community - strong qualities that continue to guide her career today.

Once she made the leap, Sam worked as a bartender while earning her license and building her business. She admits the early days were challenging. "It's a tough career to get started from scratch," she says. "Just getting systems in place and the right team around me took a little trial and error. Once I found my place on this team with Compass, I was locked in! It felt like home."

Nearly five years with Compass has given her tools, technology, and a national network that elevate every client's experience. "They're always ahead with marketing and resources, which lets me focus on the client," she says. "Knowing I can connect a client with a trusted Compass agent anywhere in the country and they'll be in good hands? Amazing."

Sam is passionate about staying visible for her clients, whether it's through marketing, networking, or client appreciation events. She thrives in a fast-changing market, helping clients navigate shifts with confidence. "The last six years have been a true roller coaster," she says. "I love showing clients there is always life-changing opportunity in real estate—the approach just has to shift."

Outside of work, Sam's life is full of activity and connection. She loves paddleboarding, hiking, mountain-town getaways, hot yoga, Pilates, and pickleball. She's a huge foodie, always on the lookout for new restaurants and a great glass of wine. She surrounds herself with longtime friends who share her love of adventure and connection.

She also lends her skills to causes that matter to her. Sam serves on the board for A Better Colorado as Marketing and Community Partnership Advisor, pairing veterans experiencing

I JUST WANT TO BE REMEMBERED AS GENUINELY KIND, EVEN WHEN IT FEELS RARE THESE DAYS.

THE KIND OF FRIEND YOU CAN CALL AFTER A DAY OR AFTER FIVE YEARS, AND KNOW I'LL PICK UP AND LISTEN. NO PERFORMANCE, just a real connection.

PTSD with life-changing service dogs. "I love being able to offer my time and marketing experience to help others," she says. "I could have been an event planner in another life—I love putting together a place for people to have a good time for a good cause."

When it comes to advice for other agents, Sam keeps it real. "Find your people and lean on them!" she says. "Real estate can be an isolating business. Don't try to do it all on your own. There is room in the industry for all of us. No need to act like other agents are your competition."

When Sam thinks about the mark she wants to leave, it comes down to something simple: kindness. "I just want to be remembered as genuinely kind, even when it feels rare these days," she says. "The kind of friend you can call after a day or after five years, and know I'll pick up and listen. No performance, just a real connection."

In an industry that can feel transactional, Sam has built a career on the opposite—making every interaction personal, every client a relationship, and every deal a steppingstone to a lifelong connection. For her, success isn't just measured at the closing table. It's measured in the people who still call her years later, knowing she'll answer.

Karen Hyman

The Home Warranty Queen of Denver

BY CHRIS MENEZES

Straightforward, dependable, and deeply committed to her clients, Karen Hyman has earned her nickname—the Home Warranty Queen of Denver. For more than a decade, she’s been the go-to resource for REALTORS® and homeowners across the Denver Metro area, guiding them with care, compassion, and a deep understanding of the home warranty process.

“I have a passion for making stressful situations easy by offering concierge service to my clients and their clients,” Karen shares. “I’m a veteran in the industry and extremely knowledgeable in the claims process, which makes it easy to set correct expectations with clients.”

That personal, hands-on approach is what sets her apart. Karen doesn’t send people to call centers or leave them chasing automated systems. She steps in directly, cutting through delays and making sure homeowners are taken care of quickly and compassionately. Her straightforward honesty builds trust from the beginning, with clear expectations and no surprises.

Education is another cornerstone of Karen’s work. She not only serves homeowners but also equips REALTORS® with the knowledge they need to better serve their clients. Her free two-hour continuing education class, The Power of Home Warranty, has been well received throughout the Denver real estate community. “Educating the real estate community is my passion,” she explains. “I want to be sure that a home warranty is the best solution for whatever situation we may be facing.”

Her title as “Queen” comes not just from her service, but also from the strength of the company she represents. As a Senior Sales Executive with Fidelity National Home Warranty, Karen has the backing of Fidelity National Financial, a Fortune 500 company with an A+ rating. Fidelity’s coverage stands out in the marketplace, protecting multiple systems, appliances, and water heaters with no additional charge and no cap.

For Karen, the value of home warranties is clear. “The cost of owning a home is high, so why not save substantial money when there’s an unexpected breakdown of a covered system or appliance?” she points out. “At Fidelity, we have no age restrictions, so the age of the item never voids coverage.”

Beyond her career, Karen’s life revolves around family. She and her husband, Michael, have been married for 37 years and are the proud parents of three grown children. Recently, they welcomed their first grandchild, Shay Rylee, a milestone Karen cherishes. Their household also includes their beloved dogs—Luke (10) and Osie (4)—who keep things lively.

The cost of owning a home is high, so why not save substantial money when there's an unexpected breakdown of a covered system or appliance?”

Although she's lived in nine states, Karen moved to Colorado 11 years ago and knew she had finally found her place. "I've fallen in love with the beauty and the people of this great state," she says. "I think I've found my forever home here."

For Denver-area REALTORS® and homeowners, Karen is more than a trusted resource—she's the steady guide who makes complicated processes simple, the advocate who ensures clients are cared for, and the professional who delivers on every promise. For Karen, it's not about the crown; it's about the service that earned it.

WANT TO ADD 3-4 MORE CLOSINGS THIS YEAR? NON-QM IS THE SOLUTION

Our Signature Series Non-Qualified Mortgage (Non-QM) loans are designed to help agents close more transactions by serving buyers who have the means, but don't fit the traditional lending box.

Why Agents Love Non-QM:

- Flexible income documentation (bank statements, 1099s, asset depletion, P&L)
- Expanded guidelines & borrower criteria
- Creative terms that work in tough markets
- Saves deals other lenders turn down

Why Agents Choose Non-QM:

- ✓ Self-employed & gig workers
- ✓ Real estate investors
- ✓ Retirees
- ✓ High DTI borrowers
- ✓ Clients with recent credit events
