Winning Execs Don't Rest on Their Laurels

Orange County's business community last year celebrated the Business Journal's 25th annual Women in Business Awards luncheon at the Hotel Irvine, where Aston Martin Americas President Laura Schwab delivered the keynote address.

The winners, selected from 200 nominees, have not been resting on their laurels, even in the era of the coronavirus.

Here are updates on what the five winners have been doing.

Shortly after Marlo Brooke won the Business Journal's award for co-founding Huntington Beach-based Avatar Partners Inc., she was accepted into the Forbes Technology Council, an invitation-only community for world-class CIOs, CTOs, and technology executives.

"Marlo was vetted and selected by a review committee based on the depth and diversity of her experience," said a company press release on the subject.

Brooke, a California State University-Long Beach grad, decided to start the company in 2003 "to serve those who serve us and protect us" after the events of Sept. 11, 2001.

The 50-person company develops technology software and products primarily for military and defense applications.

The software allows Navy mechanics to look at airplanes using a pair of smart glasses, and a phone or tablet, and troubleshoot issues or see if maintenance needs to be performed. It then gives the user a step-by-step guide for how to fix it.

Brooke, who by her own admission cusses like a sailor, which she blames on her military customers—last summer won contracts with both the Air Force and Navy.

Avatar is supplying an augmented reality

(AR) quality assurance solution for the U.S. Navy for aircraft wiring maintenance for the Naval Air Systems Command's Boeing V-22 Osprey aircraft.

Then the Air Force is using Avatar's solutions, based on techniques from X-rays to ultrasound, to help inspectors find the smallest imperfections and take corrective measures needed to keep equipment working safely.

The company has found new interest in its products because of the coronavirus and is looking for employees with a variety of skill sets.

"As a company that specializes in immersive reality and augmented reality, we have seen increased interest for virtual collaborative products that remotely connect dispersed workers," Brooke said in a June interview with the editor of Military Simulation & Training Magazine.

"While (Southern California) is a mecca of gaming and virtual reality skill sets, we need a wide variety of skill sets, including effective design and storyboarding, business and performance analysis, mechanical skills, and the ability to translate procedures into high-impact virtualized solutions that support the social and emotional needs of employees."

City of Hope

As president of the City of Hope Orange County, Annette Walker is orchestrating a $1 billion project to build one of the biggest, and scientifically advanced, cancer research centers in the world.

Located at the Great Park Neighborhoods in Irvine, the project is being overseen in conjunction with developer FivePoint Holdings LLC.

She took a big step forward in May after it completed the acquisition of property at the city's FivePoint Gateway office campus.

City of Hope, a research and treatment center for cancer, diabetes and other life-threatening diseases with its main campus in Duarte, paid $108 million for a 190,000-square-foot, four-story building at the Irvine site, and 11 acres of adjacent land.

The Irvine campus will include a comprehensive cancer center at the existing building it bought, as well as a future acute care cancer hospital and other facilities.

"We are 'all in' for the region, fulfilling a promise that will deliver pioneering research and lifesaving treatment," Walker said.

The deal has numerous ripple-down effects on the local business community.

City of Hope will be making a hiring push for the new facilities, while also bringing employees down from Duarte. Area universities could partner with City of Hope.

While the larger campus near the Orange County Great Park is being built, Walker in January opened a building in Newport Center for City of Hope's first outpatient facility in Orange County.

Walker, a mother of six and grandmother of 12, is well known in Orange County healthcare circles, also picked up two more prestigious Business Journal awards this year.

Walker's role in developing the Irvine project also earned her the Business Journal's Businessperson of the Year award for health-care.

City of Hope addressed the coronavirus on a number of fronts, including the preclinical development of a vaccine.

Walker was one of the annual OC 50 featured in the May 25 print edition of the Business Journal, which highlighted area executives making a difference in the community during the pandemic.

"We'd like this spirit of collaboration to continue because frankly cancer and other serious issues aren't going away after COVID-19," said Walker, who is keynoting this year's virtual Women in Business event on Oct. 28.

Bioniz Therapeutics

Bioniz Therapeutics Inc., an Irvine-based biopharmaceutical firm that began in 2010, in January announced a deal with a Spanish pharmaceutical company that could ultimately result in a $540 million sale of one of its main drug products.

Barcelona-based Almirall S.A., a pharmaceutical company focused on dermatology, made a $15 million upfront payment to Bioniz for exclusive global rights to BNZ-1, an inhibitor that is being tested for its ability to fight a type of lymphoma that manifests in skin.

"We are super excited," Chief Executive Nazli Azimi said at the time. "It's a very sweet deal for the company and investors."

In July, Bioniz reported "encouraging interim clinical data" from its Phase 1/2 open-label clinical study of BNZ-1 in patients with refractory Cutaneous T-Cell Lymphoma (rCTCL).

"Together with our investigators, we are excited to see the potential clinical benefit of BNZ-1

Nazli Azimi
Founder, CEO
Bioniz Therapeutics

in highly refractory CTCL patients," Azimi said.

Azimi said her company—whose board includes former Allergan CEO David Pyott and Masimo Corp. CEO Joe Kiani—has other products in its pipeline called BNZ-2 and BNZ-3, which are aimed at stomach illnesses.

"The beauty of the deal that was very important was it didn't require the full acquisition of our portfolio," Azimi said. "We will continue with other programs."

Azimi, a native of Iran who arrived in the U.S. in the early 1990s, spent a decade at the U.S. National Institutes of Health, where she completed her postdoctoral immunology program. Her board of advisers includes Robert Gallo, who became famous in 1984 when he co-discovered HIV as the cause of AIDS.

Azimi has authored more than 40 peer-reviewed, scientific publications and holds more than a dozen patents, including the Bioniz intellectual property patent estate.

FivePoint Holdings

The webpage of FivePoint Holdings LLC (NYSE: FPH) points to what it is doing: $55 billion in projected economic activity, 288,000 jobs projected to be created during construction, 23 million square feet of commercial space built or approved, 10,500 acres of planned opened space and 40,000 homes built or approved.

Hence, Chief Operating Officer Lynn Jochim has been quite busy in the past year:

■ Working with City of Hope for the start of a $1 billion project to treat cancer, the biggest healthcare project currently moving ahead in Orange County (see Annette Walker entry, this page).

Lynn Jochim
COO
FivePoint Holdings

■ Making the largest office sale in Orange County in the past three years by selling the two largest buildings at Irvine's FivePoint Gateway office campus for $355 million in August to Washington, D.C.-based PRP Real Estate Investment Management.

■ Building hundreds more homes at Irvine's Great Park Neighborhoods, including some under a new fee-building arrangement with Aliso Viejo's New Home Co. Sales remain brisk at the Irvine development during the pandemic.

Systems Source

Systems Source Inc., which supplies desks and chairs to commercial offices, found a surprising niche during the coronavirus.

"We set up a lot of work from home programs with furniture for employees," founder and CEO Rosemarie Smith said. "A lot of wonderful employers spent money for their employees to get furniture."

Systems Source built a website where employees could order products for their homes. It also set up a COVID-19 department to help employers replan their work sites and introduced new products like hand sanitizer dispensers and screens to separate desks.

It had a successful 2019, reporting revenue climbed 10% to $207.4 million and its employee count increased 7% to 227.

The coronavirus will "definitely" cause a drop in revenue this year, she said, adding that the company had to lay off "more than a few but less than a third" of its employees.

It was deemed an essential business because its clients include pharmaceutical companies supplying coronavirus tests. Some of its clients are doing well during the pandemic, such as Microsoft and Amazon.

"We were very fortunate that we had a great backlog" at the start of the coronavirus, Smith said. "We will definitely survive this."

A Shared Vision for a Better Future

"It was an honor to be recognized in 2019 alongside a group of women who are blazing new trails in their industries and are passionate about giving back to this community."

Serving as a judge for this year's Women In Business Awards further ignites my passion for collaboration and building relationships – and reinforces that we share the goal of creating a better future for all."

- Lynn Jochim, Chief Operating Officer, FivePoint

FivePoint applauds the Orange County Business Journal for shining a light on women who are excelling in the workplace.

FIVEPOINT.

With a shared mission to accelerate the future of healthcare delivery, FivePoint and City of Hope are collaborating to bring a world-class comprehensive cancer center to the FivePoint Gateway campus in Irvine.

The $1 billion investment by City of Hope will one day become a regional hub for a larger health care campus with blue-chip physician groups, wellness specialists, and pioneering research. Leading the initiative are FivePoint Chief Operating Officer Lynn Jochim and City of Hope Orange County President Annette Walker, co-recipients of the Orange County Business Journal's 2019 Women In Business Award.

Together, FivePoint and City of Hope have a vision to provide equal access to vital care for all in Orange County.

Women are primed to rebuild Orange County's economy

Women-led businesses are an economic force, fueling innovation, growth and job creation.

Over the last 50 years, the number of female-led businesses has exploded. According to the JPMorgan Chase & Co. Institute, today women represent nearly 40% of all small business owners in the United States, up from just 4.6% in 1972.

Orange County has been there every step of the way proudly creating women-led businesses.

And with the right support in today's climate, not only will women continue to lead the way, they will also rebuild Orange County from this year's economic crisis.

So what comes next?

JPMorgan Chase has expanded Women on the Move (WOTM) – our commitment to support female employees, clients and consumers. It has three main objectives: expand women-run businesses, improve women's financial health and empower women's career growth.

WOTM serves women-owned and led businesses at all stages of development, from startups to global enterprises, by providing greater access to capital, networking, expertise and advice. Lending to women-owned businesses is a key priority of the program.

The events unfolding around the world this year have highlighted inequities everywhere. As a firm, inclusivity is central to the work we do. Doing “first class business in a first class way” drives everything we do. Our commitment to integrity, fairness and responsibility are foundational principles and, to be clear, we know there's more work to do.

Our firm has made a commitment to extend $10 billion in credit to women-owned businesses. We are just getting started and plan to do much more.

We need more women-led businesses and we are excited to support women's success across Orange County as we rebuild a stronger and more inclusive economy.

College Planning in A Pandemic: 5 Questions to Ask Now

Whether your child is just beginning the planning process, an entering freshman or a returning student, getting ready to send them off to college is traditionally an exciting time for both of you. But with the current pandemic wreaking havoc on well-laid plans for the current academic year, compounded by rising tuition and, in many cases, declining household income, that excitement has been clouded over by a host of questions you might be having trouble answering.

Here we offer some guidance to help you and your child decide on the best path forward in these unprecedented times and the best ways to pay.

1 How is the coronavirus changing the college experience?

Although the pandemic should not be the driving force behind your child's ultimate choice of a college, the all-around environment of college life is difficult to come by this schoolyear as colleges struggle with social distancing restrictions that affect both classrooms and dormitories.

Dang

For many students, especially incoming freshmen, the higher the percentage of online instruction at their choice of college, the greater the number electing to sit out this schoolyear. In fact, according to higher education market research firm, the Art & Science Group, this could be the biggest gap year ever, with roughly 1 in 6 high school seniors saying they were making alternative plans for attending college this fall. The good news is that deferring admission for a year is not only acceptable, but encouraged, by more and more colleges.

2 How do we choose the right school?

Despite any aspirations you have for your child to attend a particular college — like your father's Ivy League or your own alma mater — the ultimate goal is an education that leads your child to a successful and happy future.

Speaking from decades of experience advising clients throughout the college planning process, Steve Sherline, Managing Director and Head of Private Wealth Management for Union Bank in Southern California, says: "Studies show that the most important factors for a successful education are related to how engaged the student is with professors, projects, mentors, and extracurricular activities and organizations. It can really pay off to find a school that provides an all-around environment where your child can be both motivated and comfortable."

This might well include a four-year college, but alternate avenues to consider are two-year community colleges along with internships or apprenticeships. This track might be especially appropriate, for instance, if your child has deferred this schoolyear due to the coronavirus. Alternatively, depending on your child's career plans, a vocational or trade school might be more suited to both their needs — and your pocketbook.

"Bottom line," says Steve, "there's no advantage in paying for a four-year education when experience in a particular field might be all that's required — or even desired."

3 What is the best way to pay for college if need-based financial aid is off the table?

If your household income does not allow your student to qualify for need-based financial aid, one of the best ways to save early for college is a tax-advantaged account. Some of the most popular options for college savings include 529 plans, Coverdell Savings accounts, and Education Savings Bond Programs. As far as how much to save, you can use this gauge as a starting point: if you want to cover 50 percent of your child's college costs, try to save at least $2,000 every year in your designated college fund. To cover 100 percent of college costs, you would need to double your savings each year.

Although time-consuming, it can be well worthwhile to search for scholarships, merit aid and grants to ease some of the sticker shock. A great source is the Peterson Guide to Cash for College, which lists thousands of grants and scholarships for students of all types. The key is to start the application process no later than the early part of your child's junior year of high school.

4 What is the return on investment for my child's education?

One easy way to put your child's college education into perspective is to compare tuition with how much money they stand to make after graduation, and then factor how many years they would need to work to break even on the investment. This is also a good exercise to help them take at least a first cut at whittling down their list of candidate schools and fields of study.

Begin by talking about their aspirations and career goals, then estimate how much money they can realistically expect to earn out the gate based on those projected goals. To research salary ranges for specific job roles in particular markets, you can refer to websites like Glassdoor.com and PayScale.com.

"Studies show that post-graduate salaries can vary widely depending on major," Steve points out, "but not so much on whether the graduate went to an elite private school versus a public state university."

5 Should my child help pay for school?

There are plenty of ways your child can contribute to funding their college education. One of the more common is student loans, especially now that they are available at historically low interest rates. You will want to think hard though about whether your child will be able to realistically absorb and pay off any student debt in post-graduate life or be left with an anchor of debt for many years to come.

"I think from a responsibility standpoint," offers Steve, "it is really important to have your kids assume some 'skin in the game' when it comes to the cost of their college education, especially given the statistics that a third of students won't even graduate and nearly 60 percent will take up to six years to earn a bachelor's degree."

Our People Are the Foundation of Our Success

At Ingram Micro, we're committed to helping the world Realize the Promise of Technology. This vision rings a similar tune with the goal we have for our people—helping all our associates realize their full potential.

Our people make us who we are. They are the foundation of our success and, in turn, we are committed to providing an inclusive and engaging workplace and culture where everyone is encouraged to bring their whole and best self to work, every day. Each member of our global team—35,000 and counting—offers unique insights shaped by individual experiences, backgrounds, lifestyle choices, physical traits, varied perspectives and more. We not only recognize and respect those differences—we believe they're essential to our continued success. Bringing our differences together helps make us stronger as a company and as a community.

Cultivating and preserving a culture of inclusion, diversity and fairness is a cornerstone belief at Ingram Micro, and we strive to equip every team member with the resources, education and partnerships required to support our sustained efforts towards a workplace that celebrates every individual's unique contributions. When our associates feel valued for who they are, they are more inclined to bring new ideas and innovation to the forefront.

"Our efforts have already resulted in a stronger, more collaborative workplace, both locally and globally," said Scott Sherman, executive vice president, Human Resources at Ingram Micro. "We constantly strive to do more and have recently incorporated additional inclusion topics into our learning and development curriculum, while also supporting and promoting the evolution of employee resource groups across our organization. Earlier this year we began specific senior executive listening, learning and education sessions with associates to accelerate our efforts inside and outside our organization. Another example is our Women's Leadership Forum, which provides our women associates with the tools, resources and opportunities to develop new skills and accelerate their own career progression. This group began as a local initiative and has since turned into a global effort."

We are making progress, but know we have the potential to do and achieve much more.

Great things happen when people from varying backgrounds and cultures work together in an open and collaborative environment. At Ingram Micro, we strive to ensure that all our associates feel valued, welcome and comfortable showing up as their true selves. We look forward to continuing to be an employer of choice in Orange County and throughout the world as we build further on our vision of helping every Ingram Micro associate realize their full potential!

How to Support Women Employees During a Pandemic

By Manishi Parikh
Wells Fargo Commercial Banking

As the market executive for Wells Fargo's Commercial Banking division in Orange County, I lead a team of employees whose main goal is to serve our customers and the community. Over the past few months, we have been called to find new ways to serve our customers, all while navigating the COVID-19 pandemic. Like other businesses, we've made big transformations. We moved to working remotely. We digitized many of our processes, and we formed new ways to collaborate as a team.

All of that said, it's equally imperative to find small ways to help lift each other up. Here are a few tips for business leaders to support female employees – or anyone on the team, actually – because in today's world, people of all genders play roles that need special support from their leaders.

Offer concrete support for caregivers. Many women – and men – are taking on more responsibility than ever before. Parents are serving as teachers, often 'working' both jobs at the same time. As a company, Wells Fargo has made special accommodations to support caregivers during this environment, including giving 20 days of subsidized back-up child care and priority placement and reduced tuition rates at certain child care organizations. It makes me proud to work for a company that institutes policies like this. We must show our support by offering tangible resources for our teams.

Build a safe environment. As leaders, it is also our responsibility to help team members feel safe bringing their whole self to work. For instance, having kids at home during the day has been a new 'norm' for many working parents. I've been on conference calls where kids can be heard in the background. I like to make sure my team knows that it's okay – we are all doing the best we can with the situations we are in. Make sure you are fostering an environment that is accepting of the issues employees are feeling today.

Don't forget that lifting up other women is just a start. When we consider supporting other women, we sometimes forget that there are others who are experiencing many of the same challenges women have faced in the workplace.

It's important to reach beyond gender and think of things such as race, ethnicity, age, veteran status and sexual orientation. Physical ability, religious beliefs and primary language are also important, among many others. The more intentional we are about identifying ways to lifting up those who need support, the better we can represent our community, and the more likely we are to attract and retain customers who identify with those within our company.

Remember that supporting women and diverse segments starts with the actions and behaviors set by leaders. As we wrap up the year, make this an intention, and your team will thrive.

Girl Scouts Congratulates Orange County's 2020 Women in Business Honorees and Nominees

Girl Scouts of Orange County applauds the 2020 Women in Business award recipients and nominees. Now more than ever, girls need powerful female role models across industries — inspiring women, like those highlighted in this issue, who show them there are no limits to what they can dream and achieve. This year's exceptional businesswomen are an inspiration to every girl and the nearly 18,000 Girl Scouts across Orange County.

Studies consistently show that one of the most effective ways to boost a nation's economic output, enhance productivity, and improve the overall vibrancy of society is to invest in the leadership capabilities of girls and women. We must have the best and brightest men and women at the table to innovate and problem solve. But women are underrepresented in many fields vital to our nation's growth and prosperity. Changing these statistics starts with giving girls exposure to a wide range of experiences and role models who inspire them to develop lifelong leadership skills.

Girl Scouts prepares girls to thrive when they enter the workforce. Through its unparalleled leadership development program, Girl Scouts brings out the best in girls from every social, cultural, economic, and developmental sphere. While girls are learning about STEM, the outdoors, entrepreneurship, and important life skills, they are also discovering new ways to improve our world and make their communities stronger, kinder, and better for everyone.

Girl Scouts Works!

- Girl Scouts are 20 percent more likely to be digital leaders, compared to non-Girl Scouts.
 - 70 percent of Girl Scouts say they got the opportunity to build their skills or try new outdoor activities because of Girl Scouts.
 - Girl Scouts are twice as likely to be community problem solvers and participate in civic engagement.
 - 91 percent of Girl Scouts want to be entrepreneurs in the future!
- Learn more at girlscouts.org/research.

Join the Promise Circle and pave the way for our next generation of female leaders.

When Orange County's talented and diverse young women enter the workforce, we must ensure that they are equipped with resources and support to raise their voices and find solutions to the challenges our nation and our world face. Together, we can build a future where every girl grows up with the confidence to bravely step into a lifetime of leadership.

Girl Scouts of Orange County's Promise Circle is a new opportunity to join a community of donors who demonstrate their commitment to a better tomorrow by investing in girls through an annual gift at one of several levels in the circle. When you join as a founding member, you invest in our future female leaders — talented, passionate, and courageous girls who are poised and ready to make our world a better place — for the long term. Learn more at girlscoutsoc.org/promise.

Congratulations to the 2020 Women in Business honorees and nominees!

Orange County's nearly 18,000 Girl Scouts thank the 2020 Women in Business honorees and nominees for showing us there's no challenge girls cannot overcome, no goal we cannot reach.

You inspire us to become the happy, healthy, problem-solving, barrier-breaking change-makers our world needs.

How people work is forever changing.

Businesses are meeting that challenge in the cloud.

Top 5 Reasons to Migrate to the Cloud.

In these changing times, successful businesses are thinking and operating differently. From physical workstations and remote office locations to new IT infrastructure investments and network maintenance – all of it is being reevaluated in this new virtual paradigm as businesses look to operate more efficiently and cost effectively.

Traditional office settings have rapidly migrated into virtual environments. Employees are moving into work-from-home stations. Business meetings and presentations are almost completely conducted online. And with more virtual activity comes the need for a fast and secure cloud-based solution that ensures businesses run more efficiently than ever before.

Moving to a cloud-based solution can feel like a daunting task, but in reality - it's relatively simple. Partnering with the right cloud services provider takes the guesswork and heavy lifting away.

That partner is Cox Business Cloud Solutions. To help you better understand what's involved, our team has compiled a list of the Top 5 things to consider when making a decision on cloud migration.

1 Enabling Your Mobile Workforce

With more employees working remotely than ever before, many companies have struggled to equip themselves properly. Workflows are different. Secure access to company data from various locations also presents challenges. Truth is, the sudden shift to remote work has fundamentally changed how businesses operate and left them looking to new solutions for how best to move forward without hurting productivity.

Cloud services help companies of all sizes find accessible, affordable ways to conduct business remotely. Instead of piecing together a convoluted process, often based on outdated, insecure on-premises hardware, the cloud enables teams to connect securely via a virtual desktop environment and continue their typical work process.

The cloud aids your business to function as efficiently as it would if everyone were still working traditionally from one or more office locations. This is critical not only during a pandemic when things are unexpectedly shut down, but also during any kind of business interruption - be it storms, tornadoes, natural disasters or even cyber attacks affecting your business infrastructure. Migrating to a secure cloud environment protects your critical data and gives you options for how you want to keep your business up and running.

2 Quickly Scaling Your Network

Every business is different and moving your data to the cloud isn't a one-size-fits-all solution. Cox Business Cloud Solutions provides customized services to best fit the scale and needs of each individual business. Your cloud migration plan will take into account critical workloads, data and applications, potential obstacles and a desired timeline for implementing tailored solutions. The beauty of the cloud is that it's easily scalable.

Cox Business Cloud Solutions provides a robust combination of enterprise-level services including Managed Cloud Security, Disaster Recovery, Data Backup, Virtual Desktop Environments, Software Defined Wide Area Network (SDWAN), and Enterprise Grade Infrastructure. Our team will work with you to identify the services that fit your business needs. We will also design and implement migration and monitoring strategies while also providing industry-leading customer support to ensure a safe transition for your business data.

3 Securing Your Critical Data

If there's one thing businesses worry about most with regard to sensitive data, it's security. Most companies don't want to allocate IT funds elsewhere when they are focusing department resources on continually updating, patching and assessing office systems and also protecting against outdated cyber security measures that could threaten the entire business.

Cloud solutions are inherently more secure than on-premises solutions and cloud providers manage security issues in the background more efficiently with little to no adverse effect to workloads. By utilizing the cloud, software is more easily kept up to date, backups can be made more readily and recovered faster, and documents and access controls are easier to manage. According to a RapidScale study, 94% of businesses say they actually saw an improvement after implementing cloud security solutions.

Cloud solutions can improve the level of your security with Tier 3 data centers that have biometric scanning, security guards, and around-the-clock monitoring along with fast threat detection response using a Unified Security Management platform. In addition, all of your documents are safe and accessible with full redundancy and fully managed firewalls and encryption protection, providing you peace of mind that your business is always protected.

4 Realizing Cost Savings and Maximizing Profitability

The simple fact of the matter is that building and maintaining IT infrastructure is costly, as is the real estate and accompanying insurance that infrastructure requires. Expensive hardware, software, and licensing for all devices are just the beginning. Allocating resources to IT for setup, maintenance, security and management tools all add up.

Cox Business Cloud Solutions can help reduce your costs across the board. The cloud allows lower capital spending on facilities and onsite servers while reducing the overall IT budget. Many companies that move to the cloud downsize their data centers or eliminate them entirely. It supports more regular technology upgrades, reduces ongoing maintenance and staff time, and shifts the burden for time-consuming tasks, like patches, upgrades and infrastructure expenditures to cloud service providers.

Our Cox Business Cloud Solutions support team supports your IT team, as well as your end-users – everything from device troubleshooting to application integrations to building out any new data center requirements. Not only can you reduce IT expenses by reducing physical PC costs, you can also layer in our Cloud Desktop as a Service (DaaS), which is a pay-as-you-go subscription – meaning one monthly charge, which makes budgeting simple.

5 Save Time and Valuable IT Resources by Choosing the Right Partner

There are lots of reasons cloud migration makes sense, but moving forward ultimately requires finding a trusted cloud services partner who listens to your needs and translates that into a strategic migration plan that fits your unique business needs.

Cox Business is a trusted provider of business technology services and our Cloud Solutions team is among the best in the industry. Our solutions will grow with your business and ensure you have the support of certified professionals for your IT staff and end users available 24/7.

Contact us today to learn more about migrating your business to the cloud so that you are fully prepared for whatever the future may bring.

Women in the Workplace: A Strategic Priority

In a global economy with an increasingly tight yet diverse workforce, employers must create workplaces that suit the needs of diverse populations. And women are a big part of the equation. In fact, according to a recent economic blog update by RSM Chief Economist Joe Brusuelas and one of RSM's Industry Eminentes, Laura Dietzel, women now outnumber men in the workforce (50.04% to 49.96%). There are 109,000 more women than men in the American workforce, excluding agricultural jobs, which foreshadows what we at RSM believe will be a significant period of change in wages, benefits and the way companies of all sizes work.

And yet, certain questions in the fourth quarter of RSM's 2019 RSM US Middle Market Business Index (MMBI) uncovered that only 27% of executives indicated that their organizations support gender-equality causes, and 46% reported that they are focused on women's issues and empowerment. Without a stronger focus on women, these businesses will miss out on the benefits driven by this shift in the workforce and the diverse perspectives women bring to business.

A formalized inclusion strategy can enhance a company's ability to attract and retain high-performing women. At RSM, our 11 employee network groups help ensure that all of our 11,000+ employees nationwide feel a sense of belonging at our firm. One of these groups – STAR (Stewardship. Teamwork. Advancement. Retention.) – is focused specifically on women. And while it's geared toward women, STAR is open to anyone at RSM who is interested in issues important to this segment of our workforce. Members receive regular communications from STAR leaders and are invited to participate in various events across the firm. We also make leadership opportunities available to STAR members, so they can learn and practice important workplace skills in a friendly and supportive environment.

What else can employers do to help women succeed in the workplace? Each company has a unique culture that shapes the way its people interact, so activities focused on women in the workplace should be tailored to each company's culture. Some we've found successful at RSM include:

- Create a formalized inclusion plan. This might include a focused recruitment strategy that targets diverse populations, with an emphasis on women. Employers should regularly review talent pipelines, and monitor attrition and promotion rates for women, and make adjustments where needed to ensure that they can attract and retain key female talent.
- Place an emphasis on leadership. Provide leadership mentoring programs for high-performing women to help them build their internal networks, create a sense of community and enable your company to address leadership issues with the female perspective as part of the equation.
- Provide flexibility. Help employees manage the demands of both their professional and their personal lives. While flexibility benefits all employees and their employers, it's particularly helpful for women, who tend to shoulder more of the responsibility for activities on the home front.
- Offer educational and networking opportunities. Implement programs around self-advocacy, networking opportunities and access to other women leaders to foster additional and inspiration that might not be found elsewhere in a corporate setting. RSM recently hosted a women's leadership event where we focused on teaching women how to build their personal brands, boost their self-confidence, fine-tune their negotiation skills, develop pools of allies and sponsors, and become self-advocates. While these topics are relevant to all of our professionals, there are differences in how women approach these things and in how they're perceived when they do. Openly acknowledging these differences and discussing how to address them makes women more confident in their careers.

- Be creative. Continuously look for innovative ways to talk about gender inclusion. At RSM, for example, we offer our STAR ENG "Women's Words of Wisdom" video series, which provides tips and insights on a variety of topics important to STAR members. These aren't expensive, professionally produced videos, but simple brief videos shot with personal phones that allow us to quickly and easily share information and insights to help women succeed.

With women now accounting for more than 50% of today's workforce, providing a welcoming and inclusive work environment for this portion of the population is clearly a business imperative. Take the steps needed today to keep your company competitive in the future.

Dara Castle is the Washington, DC Metropolitan Area Offices market leader and is the national leader of RSM's government contracting practice. As the market leader, she is responsible for the culture, growth and strategy of the four Washington area offices and developing employees to have deep industry expertise and to be first choice advisors to the middle market, globally. As the leader of RSM's Women's Initiative, Castle focuses on the retention and advancement of RSM women through the STAR employee network group. This work includes leading the strategy and development of programs and initiatives that address gender diversity in RSM's workplace, workforce, community and marketplace.

Yudit Freda is a senior manager in RSM's State and Local Tax Practice. Freda is a senior leader in RSM's National Abandoned and Unclaimed Property Practice and also leads RSM Orange County's Women's Network. Freda has more than 15 years of public accounting experience. Her clients have included leaders in the industrial and consumer products, financial services, manufacturing, and entertainment industries.

City of Hope Newport Beach Nurse Practitioner Understands Patients' Breast Cancer Journeys

SURVIVOR LINDA BUCK CALLS ON PERSONAL EXPERIENCE WHEN DELIVERING COMPASSIONATE, WORLD-CLASS CARE

“Patients can ask me anything. I know what it’s like. I have the book knowledge but I also have the personal experience.”

-Linda Buck, Nurse Practitioner
City of Hope Newport Beach

“The fact that I was in graduate school helped me,” she said. “I had a lot of support from friends and family. It helped me stay focused on what I needed to do and not get lost in what was going on with my health at the time.”

Buck recently marked her one-year work anniversary, but City of Hope has been part of Buck’s career for many years. It’s where she earned her first chemotherapy certification and found many learning opportunities. That’s why it’s special for her to be part of City of Hope’s expansion into Orange County.

“Patients who live in OC don’t have to drive for hours to get the kind of care we offer at City of Hope,” she said. “The Newport Beach location is beautiful and calming. It may sound unusual to say a person can relax while they’re getting chemotherapy, but we have everything to help make that possible. We have chairs that vibrate for a little massage, and open windows where you can see outside; you’re not stuck in a closed doctor’s office. Our patients are grateful to have access to a wide range of services in one location and be able to put long commutes for treatment behind them.”

While Buck spends most of her working hours with breast oncologist Wade Smith, M.D., and breast surgical oncologist Hang T. Dang, D.O., she has also supported the location’s physicians who specialize in other forms of cancer. She found the opportunities to be “a beautiful learning experience.”

“City of Hope Newport Beach physicians are highly trained cancer specialists. They have a broad network of colleagues to consult with. And many of them are clinician-scientists whose research is leading to breakthrough treatments,” Buck said. “The resources our patients have access to are almost endless, unlike anywhere else I know of in the Orange County area.”

The opportunity to offer support is especially meaningful to Buck. “It’s a privilege and an honor to build relationships with patients and their families, because patients have a choice who they are going to see, and they keep coming back to us. Cancer, its treatment and survivorship, is not like having a one-time procedure where it’s repaired, you’re done, and you never see the surgeon again,” Buck said.

Buck believes that nursing nourishes relationships – it’s in the nature of the profession, she said. And, grounded in the professional and personal wisdom Buck has gained as a practitioner and a survivor, it’s evident that building common bonds helps her offer the best hope for patients.

When Linda Buck began working as a nurse practitioner, she made it a habit to spend about an hour with each of her new breast cancer patients, discussing the ins and outs of their treatment. She spoke with an innate knowledge that transcended her clinical expertise—she’s a breast cancer survivor who’d been on their same journey, too.

“I’d tell them, ‘I want you to know this about me so you’ll feel truly free to express yourself. You can ask me anything. I know what it’s like,’” Buck said. “I have the book knowledge, but I also have the personal experience. That was very meaningful. Some patients would start to cry when I told them, because it made them feel like, ‘She gets it.’”

Buck practices at City of Hope Newport Beach, where she’s involved in almost every aspect of her patients’ breast cancer care, from answering questions about side effects or medication refills to reviewing scans or going on rounds. And she’s happy to share advice when needed.

“I frequently tell people that what they are feeling and experiencing is normal,” she said. “They need to allow themselves to have their feelings, no matter what they are. I try to reassure patients their emotions are valid, and that helps them to relax and then move forward when they can.”

Those breakthrough moments inspire Buck. “It’s amazing to see the growth that can come out of a person’s journey,” Buck said. “To be with them and see them gain inner strength that changes how they present themselves to the world makes me think, ‘Wow, I need to stretch myself some more.’”

Buck’s own breast cancer diagnosis required a lot of stretching. An oncology nurse for three decades, she discovered she had early-stage HER2 overexpressed breast cancer in fall 2010, during the first semester of her nurse practitioner program. Buck navigated surgery, an intense four months of chemotherapy, and a year of maintenance while also keeping up with her coursework.

The Power of Financial Confidence Among Women

By City National Bank

The year 2020 marks the 100th anniversary of the 19th amendment, the landmark change to the U.S. Constitution that granted women the right to vote. The amendment was the result of tireless activism by women like Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Lucretia Mott and Susan B. Anthony – names now synonymous with the women's rights movement.

But the passage of the amendment holds more than just political importance. It was a moment that has rippled outwards over the past 100 years, allowing successive generations of women to obtain more education, fight for higher wages, accumulate greater personal wealth and move closer to equality.

Today, women earn the majority of college degrees and have done so since the early 1980s, according to the National Center for Education.

Women contribute $7.6 trillion to the United States gross domestic product annually and lead the way as entrepreneurs, owning more than 9.9 million businesses in the U.S. with 8.4 million employees.

Women also influence how money is given. According to a survey by The Economist Intelligence Unit (EIU), commissioned by RBC Wealth Management, 81 percent of women see it as important that both their wealth plan and legacy align.

Carolyn Finer, senior investment strategist for City National Rochdale, has worked in the financial industry for 30 years and has noted the changes in how women participate in wealth planning decisions.

"Over time, I've seen women become much more engaged than they were at the beginning of my career. Whenever we're speaking with a couple, we always want to engage with both. But now, we see more and more women taking the lead," said Finer.

In most cases women outlive men, putting them in sole control of family wealth and legacy before it passes to the next generation.

Yet, despite this progress towards equality and economic power, Finer said there's always opportunity to increase education and financial confidence among even the most powerful people, including women.

What Affects Women's Financial Confidence?

With their findings outlined in an article in The Atlantic, researchers saw differing levels of financial confidence when comparing a man and a woman with the same educational background and a similar financial literacy level.

"Though research shows us that men are more confident when discussing finances, we're seeing more and more clients who are strong, independent women. It's just that women seem more apt to say I don't know, but I want to learn. I would say this is its own type of confidence, though, and should be encouraged among everyone," said Finer.

A lot of issues with financial confidence may stem from the cultural narrative surrounding women and money, but making money a more common conversation for women can and has increased women's confidence in making financial decisions, Finer added.

"I disagree with the notion that women don't understand how to handle money. They have so many responsibilities...they're accustomed to taking on many different roles and making important decisions. Finances is just one of them, and financial confidence comes from having a project or platform to exercise that knowledge," she said.

Knowledge is Power

Perhaps as a result of having more of those tools available, younger generations are reporting an increased financial confidence.

For example, according to RBC's The New Face of Wealth survey, 72 percent of Millennial women said they are their household's primary decision-maker for financial planning, compared to less than half of Baby Boomer women.

What's more, 78 percent of Millennial women said they've had more opportunities to generate wealth than people in prior generations.

"I have a female client who gave her Millennial daughter the opportunity to be an active participant in the establishment and maintenance of a private family foundation. This family inherited a substantial amount of wealth and with that comes a lot of responsibility," said Finer. "They were eager to instill confidence in the next generation."

Conversion is Key

Despite all the progress made over the past 100 years, there's always more work to be done. Work that could, in essence, make the world a more equal place.

"It's important to work together and have financial or investment conversations early and often with the right participants," said Finer. "As more and more women are involved in the family conversations, their voice is key." In these uncertain times, City National encourages you to review your investment portfolio with your advisor. The Merage School Reaches Gender Parity in Master's Programs: 50% of Students are Women

By Sydney Charles

The UCI Paul Merage School of Business has officially reached gender parity throughout its master's programs—50% of master's students are women—for the 2019-2020 school year. Of the 593 students enrolled in MBA and specialty master's programs, 297 are women. Notably, 51% of Master of Finance (MFIN) students and 72% of Master of Public Accountancy students are women. In addition, according to an article in the Financial Times, the Merage School has nearly reached the same milestone within faculty; about 47% of full-time faculty members are female. The Financial Times ranks the Merage School as #1 in number of female faculty.

According to Professor of Accounting Joanna Ho, these statistics are indicative of the School's proven dedication to diversity and inclusion.

“Reaching gender parity sends an important signal to the academic community and the business community at large.”

She said, “I joined the faculty back in 1986, when we only had 23 faculty members. Even then, about a quarter of the faculty were female—a significant achievement. Over the past 34 years, we’ve increased to almost 50% female faculty, something we should all be very proud of.”

Reaching gender parity sends an important signal to the academic community and the business community at large.

Burt Slusher, director of recruitment and admissions of business specialty master's programs, explained, “Gender parity helps us shape our vision for where the school and our students are going. This is going to impact the future of business leaders that will graduate from our School, and we are committed to not just reaching but also maintaining gender parity across our programs.”

A commitment to diversity ensures that women feel welcome at the School.

“I appreciate being a part of an environment that promotes diversity of thought,” said Alaina McClue, MIE '20. The female entrepreneurs in my cohort are inspiring forces that will move mountains in the future. I look forward to seeing all the great heights the women of the Merage School will reach in the coming years.

Representation of women and other underrepresented minorities in business is fundamental for the success of the Merage School.

“Women need female role models,” said Ho. It lets them know that they can take on leadership roles in their career and that powerful women are the norm, not the exception. This is true for both men and women that study at the Merage School.”

“When you have a more diverse group in a class, you have different ideas, backgrounds and cultures,” agreed Slusher. It's important to have a lot of seats at the table to represent diverse backgrounds.”

Orange County's Women of Impact

Empowering Leadership & Improving Lives

Orange County United Way is leading the fight for equity in Orange County by doing everything we can to remove barriers, close gaps, and level the playing field for everyone who lives here.

This year, more than ever, our work has been made more impactful thanks to the strength of the Orange County women supporting our mission—community members, business leaders, and visionaries who are focused on enabling disadvantaged children with opportunity, building self-sufficiency for struggling families, and having humanity for our neighbors experiencing homelessness.

Women's Philanthropy Fund: A Force for Good

One of the most powerful voices of philanthropy in Orange County, the Orange County United Way Women's Philanthropy Fund is a group of nearly 100 influential and passionate women who create long-lasting social and economic change by advancing United Way's mission in challenged neighborhoods across the county. Together, the Women's Philanthropy Fund members are a diverse group of change-makers united in their vision to help empower our community.

With the onset of the COVID-19 crisis, the annual Women's Philanthropy Fund Breakfast—an inspirational fundraising event—was quickly transformed into a successful virtual event with celebrity guest speaker Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. Attracting over 800 attendees, the event raised $440,000 for OC families and children facing poverty and housing instability in challenged neighborhoods, a critical area of focus in the wake of the pandemic.

The Women's Philanthropy Fund is also quick to respond to community needs. Twenty-six incredible members collectively donated over $270,000 to Orange County United Way's Pandemic Relief Fund to support homelessness prevention for families impacted by the pandemic, help

“I've been a donor to the United Way for over 30 years, and one of the reasons is that United Way puts your money to work in the community where you live and work—I feel that's really important.” —Lisa A. Locklear

Lisa A. Locklear, Women's Philanthropy Fund member and Vice President & Chief Financial Officer, Avanir Pharmaceuticals, Inc.

Lisa A. Locklear, Women's Philanthropy Fund member and Vice President & Chief Financial Officer, Avanir Pharmaceuticals, Inc., said, “I gave to the Orange County United Way Pandemic Relief Fund because it reminds me we're all in this together as we fight the effects of COVID-19 in our community.”

Lisa was also an inspirational force at Avanir Pharmaceuticals, with her colleagues raising $22,000 for the Pandemic Relief Fund in just a matter of weeks as part of their workplace campaign. And the company generously doubled employee contributions, bringing the total to $44,000.

students in need of remote learning supplies and books, and provide meals for seniors, frontline workers, and for individuals experiencing homelessness staying at shelters.

Women United: Stepping Up for Those in Need

With more than 400 members, Orange County United Way's Women United is an energetic group of Orange County women with a common purpose. Through their collective generosity, a slate of events, and a shared commitment to philanthropy and volunteerism, they're building relationships while making a difference.

The members of Women United have not only contributed to the Pandemic Relief Fund, but they have also been working together to donate meals to five transitional living shelters across Orange County since the pandemic began. These meals have supported over 180 people.

And that's not all—already, Women United has committed to supporting an additional three shelters before the year comes to an end.

“What I love about being part of Women United specifically is that it allows me to show up in a real way for my community, even when I can't physically be there. Women United provides numerous programs for our members; volunteer events, networking events, education events. But I know that at times when I'm too busy to be involved, I'm part of a network of women and staff members at United Way who are working to affect structural change in my community.” —Nisha Verma

Empowering Women of OC

In its fourth year, Women United with Bank of America will again be hosting a 3-part Local, Global & Me series. These events aim to empower the women of Orange County and bring together powerhouse panelists and networking opportunities for local women in business and philanthropy.

This year's first virtual Local, Global & Me event took place on October 1, 2020, and focused on positive psychology and resilience with guest speaker Dr. Zelana Montminy, author of 21 Days of Resilience.

Join the Women of Orange County United Way

We invite the women of Orange County to join us as we look to the future in helping our community overcome the challenges of the pandemic and work to ensure every student has the opportunity to graduate, every individual can live a healthier life, every family can achieve financial stability, and everyone has a safe place to call home.

Whether it be through donating time, money, or simply lending a supporting voice, we welcome all women who are passionate about our community and want to be a part of a powerful and vibrant coalition of women who empower one another.

Insights from CEO Joni Rogers-Kante

It is my honor to serve on the Judging Committee for the 2020 Women in Business Awards, selecting the most influential female business leaders of today. Ladies, it's time – we are creating the new normal.

No one can tell you in advance how hard it is to run a business, or make decisions for thousands of people, or give you solutions when they do not yet exist. It's about learning on the job one day at a time. For women, I think our toughest challenge is developing what I call "emotional muscle." That is learning how to protect ourselves from the emotional toll of having to make really hard decisions. We're used to solving problems where everyone wins, like sharing two cookies between three kids. In business, that's not always possible, and it takes time to adjust to that.

Being an entrepreneur during a pandemic and times of uncertainty is tough. Choosing to be an entrepreneur means that you embrace the challenges and are prepared to be innovative.

Market Reports indicate that 50% of privately owned business have closed and will never re-open. Despite months of grim economic headlines, the beauty and skin care industry has stood out as a rare bright spot. In fact, SeneGence® has launched over 70 products since January, including several new shades of LipSense® and our newest skin care product, Advanced SenePlex+® Renewal Serum with Retinol.

Direct selling may be the future when other options of yesterday are no longer available. At SeneGence, we offer a great brand, additional income, flexibility, and a sisterhood that supports women of all backgrounds to come together in support and love.

The savvy consumer today demands added value for their dollars spent. Conversations about popular products are far more extensive and not limited to the product itself. "Well-rounded" means the product not only works, but it exceeds expectations in performance, as does our SeneGence Cosmetics and SkinCare.

Additionally, consumers want their purchases to contribute to the benefit of society or advance a cause that is important to its users. In our case, our nonprofit organization, The Make Sense Foundation®, supports women and children in need, and a percentage of sales of select products benefit the Foundation.

Our plans are to grow both our domestic and international business. SeneGence is currently in 17 countries and we have planned expansions in 2021. In January 2020, we launched in Hong Kong, and we opened a new facility in Vancouver, Canada in February 2020. The best way for readers to support our company is to visit SeneGence.com and click on "Find the Nearest Distributor", try our products, fall in love, and spread the word! If you want products and a career path that really works, come aboard. We have a very exciting ride ahead!

Q&A with Joni Rogers-Kante

1. Can you tell us a bit about your backstory? What led you to this particular career path?

I spent the first 15 years of my life on a farm in the small town of Sapulpa, Oklahoma. My first job was at age 16 in California with Sav-On Drugs. Being something of a girly-girl, I loved the magic and sparkle of the cosmetic aisle most of all! I earned several promotions within the chain store, but I knew the corporate life was not right for me. A friend introduced me to Mary Kay cosmetics, and it all came together. The sky was the limit with selling products I loved and the freedom to work hard. Eventually, having a son and working from home with direct sales was the perfect avenue to provide for him and me. From there, starting SeneGence was a big, but inevitable, leap based on two simple ideas: to offer women products that really work and to offer careers that really work by selling those products. I can honestly say it is as true today as it was twenty years ago.

2. What are the biggest challenges faced by women executives that aren't typically faced by their male counterparts?

This question goes to the heart of why I started SeneGence. For many of us, family is a big part of our lives and wanting to spend time with kids or perhaps aging parents shouldn't be considered a privilege. For women who work outside of the home, juggling work and family is a tougher act than for men, simply because the role of nurturer and caretaker falls to us, naturally. With SeneGence, I want to continue leveling the playing field so that more women – and also men – can design the work schedule they need so they don't have to give up income for time with the family.

3. What is your favorite product you have launched in 2020?

I have to say the Advanced SenePlex+ Renewal Serum with Retinol. Going through the development of this product was so exciting and it was satisfying to see the amazing results we got back from the clinical study performed with the serum! Real women and real results – this is what we strive for! Every woman should have this product in their nighttime routine.

4. We understand that your premier product, LipSense Liquid Lip Color, just received the Beauty "ICONS Award" by SHAPE Magazine. What is your favorite shade?

We have over 100 shades of LipSense and I love so many of them, but I would say my go-to color is Pink Champagne!

How We Got Here: 4 Keys to Professional Growth & Development

By Jenny Dinnen & Katie Rucker

We used to look at high-level business professionals and wonder if we had what it takes to be in that position. Here we are at the helm of our family business, and often reflect on our former selves – wondering what we'd say to them if given the chance.

First off, we would say "you got this." Believing in yourself is the most powerful growth driver. Then we would share some important practices that continue proving their worth daily.

Build a strong network of support

We have been blown away by the support and encouragement from other women in business. Further, we've been humbled to find their support isn't only business oriented; it extends to all areas of life.

Rome wasn't built in a day, and neither was our incredible network of women. It took time and energy that in all honesty – as sisters, wives, and mothers - we didn't have. Still we put in the effort and that effort has been returned in ways we could never have imagined.

Be willing to ask for help

It seems a common trait among women in business is the desire to be self-sufficient. Especially when climbing the career ladder, it's easy to see asking for help as a sign of weakness. This couldn't be further from the truth. This outlook based on our experiences as young professionals and as business owners who are empowering others to rise in their careers.

Asking for help shows a sense of vulnerability, humility, and teachability which are signs of a person who wants to learn and grow. In doing so, you become the best version of yourself and move ever closer to those pivotal moments of progress.

Stay resilient in the face of adversity

To grow we must be willing to take risks and move outside our comfort zone. This requires strength, bravery, and the resilience to stand tall after falling short.

In business and in life, the way we respond to adversity is more important than the way we respond to success.

One's true character is revealed when faced with difficult times, so treat difficult times as opportunities to shine rather than reasons to give up.

Be bold and find your voice

Many people, regardless of age or gender, have difficulty communicating how they're feeling, what they want, or when they need something. This leads to unmet expectations and frustration on both sides. When you have a new idea – share it. When you need time off – ask for it. If you feel things should change – say it. Your voice is unlike anyone else, so it's extremely valuable. Don't hold back.

MacKenzie

On behalf of our entire team, we'd like to say congratulations to the Women in Business nominees.

Your strength, grace, compassion, and generosity have been an inspiration throughout our careers.

Illumination Foundation: Illuminating Women in Business & Leadership

By Erika L. Silver, Ph.D

Founded by two men in 2008, it is the women at Illumination Foundation (IF) who have become the shining stars. This Orange County-based nonprofit makes its mission to disrupt the cycle of homelessness, and since July 2018 alone, Illumination Foundation has provided more than 780,000 shelter bed nights, and housed close to 1,700 people throughout Orange, Los Angeles, and San Bernardino counties. A key element fueling its impact is the teamwork of its entire staff and the supportive attitude of its leadership.

Illumination Foundation is unique as a nonprofit working to alleviate homelessness; it doesn't focus on just shelter or healthcare or housing, but integrates all three into its model of care—from shelter nights to recuperative care to permanent supportive housing—and its staff works diligently to promote its core value that housing is healthcare.

At the helm of four vital departments are women who have made it their personal missions to step up and do what they can to alleviate the problem of homelessness. From their desk duties managing budgets and schedules to leadership development to one-on-one interactions with board members and clients alike, these women have what it takes to keep Illumination Foundation running smoothly.

According to Paul Leon, CEO and Founder of Illumination Foundation, it is as if these women “are each running their own nonprofit under the umbrella of Illumination Foundation. If I didn't have them, we would be a quarter of our size and our impact. I could leave this organization in the hands of any one of them, and I know we would continue to be in great hands.”

Contact info: www.ifhomeless.org or email Tcampbell@ifhomeless.org.

Deby Wolford, Director of Housing Services

Deby Wolford arrived at Illumination Foundation in October 2019, after 15 years with Colette's Children's Home. She started as an intern and worked her way up until, ultimately, she was Program Manager for all of Colette's housing programs. As Director of Housing Services at IF, Deby oversees the family emergency shelters, rapid re-housing programs, permanent supportive housing, micro-communities, and the staff at both Multi-Service Centers (in Stanton and Anaheim).

Deby thrives on the opportunity to make connections with IF's clients and see that they get the help they need, from beginning to end: “Making that connection with one child, one parent, one individual is why I do what I do. I love having 100 balls in the air, but it's the connection to the people we serve that makes our work meaningful.”

“My own experiences give me the capability to empathize and relate to the clients we serve, but at the same time not stand for excuses. I know it's hard to get back on your feet, but I also know it's possible. The experience I bring to Illumination Foundation is my strength, but my compassion is more important. I'm really grateful for the opportunity to work at Illumination Foundation. When you are surrounded by people you admire who are supporting you, you can go to places you never imagined.”

Terry Campbell, VP of Marketing and Communications

Terry Campbell first joined the Illumination Foundation family in 2017 when she was hired as a contractor to produce OC Chef's Table, IF's annual event to raise funds specifically for their family emergency shelters and for children experiencing homelessness. Having co-founded and run a marketing company of her own, Terry has the wide range of skills necessary to successfully run a marketing department.

She chose to move from the commercial to nonprofit sector to be able to give more back. “I am grateful,” Terry says, “to help bring solutions for homelessness into the public eye and help educate about a problem that affects so many people in so many ways. There is a lot of judgment, bias, and myth around the social issues surrounding homelessness, but it's inspiring to see so many people care about the issue so deeply.”

“I particularly see that level of care among the staff here at Illumination Foundation. There is a lot of talent in this company, and everyone here chooses to work for a nonprofit, and they choose to work for the homeless. This speaks to our mission and the culture of the company. We are often encouraged by the Executive Team to run our department as if it's our own business. We are encouraged that if something is going to contribute in a positive way to the population we serve, then go for it. I love being around people that I can learn from, and I want to make a difference in people's lives.”

Yvette Ahlstrom, VP of Orange County Operations

Yvette Ahlstrom has been with Illumination Foundation since November 2010—almost from its beginning. Yvette gained her strong business acumen through her hands-on experience with staff and clients, by managing budgets that have grown exponentially year after year, and she is extremely proud that the housing department came into existence under her guidance.

“IF is very good at recognizing talent, cultivating that talent, and helping those individuals rise to leadership levels,” Yvette explains. “I am the perfect example of how you can start at the bottom, and with hard work and service, you can be elevated.” As Vice President of OC Operations, Yvette oversees the OC recuperative care program; the shelters and navigation centers; and all logistics, expansion, and planning for Illumination Foundation. Most recently, this has also included six OC Project Roomkey sites, providing shelter in the wake of COVID-19 for vulnerable people experiencing homelessness.

“Everyone at Illumination Foundation is here because they are passionate about the act of service, Yvette continues, “and everyone is appreciated for the gifts that they bring that contribute to the service of the whole. We are a family, and we care about each other deeply, and we take care of each other and our clients. I am proud to be a part of that work ethic.”

Elizabeth Saldana, VP of LA and IE Operations

Elizabeth Saldana began working with nonprofits in 2007 when she joined Giving Children Hope (GCH) in Buena Park, where she worked until 2015. Before coming to Illumination Foundation in 2019, Elizabeth worked for the Community Action Partnership of OC, where she oversaw their Orange County outreach and Central Valley operations.

“Working at CAP OC,” Elizabeth explains, “created an opportunity to run operations for a large geographical area and to manage large-scale contracts, worth over $13 million in more than 10 counties. These challenges gave me the invaluable experience that I now draw on every day for the large contracts I oversee at IF and the hundreds of clients we serve.”

A graduate of the Management Development for Entrepreneurs program at UCLA's Anderson School of Management, Elizabeth understands the nuances of business development, client service, and leadership. “One of my main responsibilities with IF,” Elizabeth continues, “is staff training and development. I'm really focused on our Guiding Principles, and with my management and leadership team, I'm always pushing them to be the best version of themselves.”

“Illumination Foundation is innovative in its approach to disrupting the cycle of homelessness, and we are always looking for ways to help our clients. We are all here because we believe in the mission, and we know that what we are doing has a lasting impact.”

ILLUMINATION FOUNDATION

DISRUPTING THE CYCLE OF HOMELESSNESS

Illuminating Women in Leadership and Business

Founded in 2008, the mission of Illumination Foundation is to disrupt the cycle of homelessness. In 2019, the impact Illumination Foundation had on homelessness was immense:

- 288,559 safe shelter nights of stay were provided
- 2,624 people were served by Illumination Foundation
- 1,191 homeless clients received recuperative care services
- 596 families and individuals were housed in Illumination Foundation programs
- 174 individuals were diverted from entering the cycle of homelessness

As leaders within Illumination Foundation, these four women are illuminating what it takes to combine business acumen with social entrepreneurship and a heart for giving back. They manage the four major business segments within the company that have delivered exponential growth year-over-year.

Meet some of the fearless female leaders behind Illumination Foundation.

Deby Wolford

Director of Housing Services

"We all get lost along the way at times. It is a privilege to be a part of a team that helps others find their way back home."

Terry Campbell

VP of Marketing & Communications

"It's inspiring to be able to tell the stories that can change a person's heart and mind about homelessness. This job has made me a better person and has impacted the way I see the world and my fellow human beings."

Yvette Ahlstrom

VP of Orange County Operations

"I am grateful every day for the opportunities to serve the most vulnerable of our community in ways that truly make a difference. I am a better person because of the people I work with and those we serve. My eyes have been opened, and my life has been changed forever."

Elizabeth Saldaña

VP of LA & IE Operations

"I am humbled to be part of a team creating life-changing opportunities for the most vulnerable. My desire is to continue creating partnerships and awareness for the benefit of individuals and families experiencing homelessness."

ATTORNEYS AT LAW

Q&A with Michele Vercoski
Partner of McCune Wright Arevalo, LLP

Leading the firm's Orange County office and contingency commercial practice group, Partner Michele Vercoski has obtained substantial and significant results for her clients. One of her many accomplishments is belonging to the elite group of lawyers admitted to the United States Supreme Court and arguing a business issue on her case before nine justices.

What does it mean to you to lead the firm's O.C. office and contingency commercial practice group?

It means a lot to me. I have always been drawn to fighting for the underdog against the bully. In my litigation career, I have focused my practice on taking cases where I am fighting for consumers and smaller businesses that are being taken advantage of by Fortune 500 heavyweights. What excites me about my present leadership position is having the freedom to carefully choose which clients I think we can best serve and use my passion to make a difference. I am also committed to the advancement of women in the workplace, business and in society. This position allows me to help other women lawyers and women entrepreneurs to have a fair chance in their workplace and business endeavors.

Briefly describe your experience in the United States Supreme Court. The experience was surreal. Less than 20% of the lawyers who have appeared before the Supreme Court in recent years have been women, and I was acutely aware that I was one of a very small number. Still, there was something extraordinary and symbolic in standing before the justices, engaging in this type of competitive, verbal battle. It is the crown jewel of oral advocacy and I am so glad I had the opportunity to go for it.

How do you enjoy spending your time outside of the firm? I love to run competitively. I often come up with great solutions or strategies for my cases while running, because it really allows me to clear my head and connect with my thoughts. I also love cooking and spending time with my three amazing children.

What advice do you have for other women in business? Take risks and be persistent. Rise up to challenges and do not be afraid. As women, good work and hard work is simply not enough. We must take the next step and ask for what we want and most importantly, we must support other women. Nothing happens unless you put yourself out there and take that chance. Be fearless!

2020 Women in Business Award Nominees

Olivia Duane Adams, Chief Customer Officer

Alteryx Inc., Irvine

Olivia Duane Adams is the chief customer officer and co-founder of Alteryx, and one of only a handful of female founders to take a technology company public. Adams' vision for diversity and leadership in the creation of the world's leading data science and analytics community is a key factor in the company's 22-plus year success. Under Adams' leadership, the Alteryx Community has grown both on- and offline, serving as an incubator for empowering women in business via the Alteryx Women of Analytics initiative and inspiring citizen data scientists to understand the thrill of solving via self-service analytics. Adams is proud to be a founder of a company that has seen significant growth while also emphasizing a culture of diversity. Alteryx was recognized by The Org as one of the top 23 tech companies with the most gender diverse executive teams, with 33% of executive leadership being female. In a tech world where only 29 percent of executives are female, taking the company public in March 2017 was an incredible business feat, and what's more impressive is that Alteryx has had the top performing tech IPO of the last two years, according to recent Bloomberg data.

Brateil Aghasi, CEO

WISEPlace, Santa Ana

Brateil Aghasi has led the transformation of WISEPlace to lead the efforts in alleviating homelessness for unaccompanied women in Orange County. She is a visionary leader who is focused on bringing real solutions to alleviate homelessness for vulnerable women, so they do not have to face adversity alone. As the CEO of WISEPlace, she is leading the path towards a 'Housing First' approach with a $21 million dollar building partnership with Jamboree to build 52 units of permanent supportive housing with a full array of wrap around services such as case management, counseling, and employment support. This is the first housing development in WISEPlace and Orange County's history to build supportive housing for unaccompanied women in OC. Under her fearless leadership, WISEPlace has increased the number of women served by 183% as well as 53% financial growth. She is also a dedicated volunteer and serves on Boards for CSUF and UCI.

Lourdes Ahn, CEO

Upshoot, Costa Mesa

Lourdes Ahn is the CEO of Upshoot, a healthy lifestyle startup headquartered in Costa Mesa, CA, that is on a mission to make plant-powered nutrition accessible to everyone. Ahn has 20+ years' experience transforming brands and people from the inside out. She is a c-suite executive, culture creator, and change management expert who specializes in turning vision and mission into impactful programs and products that benefit people as well as the planet. She has architected organizational and cultural change blueprints for diverse national and international multi-million-dollar brands in the bioplastics, natural foods and direct-selling industries. She has built Upshoot from the ground up through passionate high-performance teams, science-backed and proven programs, and quality tested nutrition products that are improving how people perceive and consume plant-based foods as well as reduce their carbon footprint. In less than a year, she launched a national company that has innovated four plant-based products (Shake, Smoothie, Super Drink, and Soup), built a strong network of distributors, established a growing customer base, and transformed eating habits.

Jessica Aliotti, Financial Advisor

Northwestern Mutual, Irvine

Jessica Aliotti joined Northwestern Mutual – West Los Angeles as a financial advisor in 2014, and currently runs her practice in Orange County. An expert in tax efficiency, risk mitigation, and wealth preservation, Aliotti is passionate about helping others realize their vision of a sound financial future. Her greatest professional achievements can be measured by the impact she has on her clients' lives and financial security. In 2016 & 2018, Aliotti was recognized as the #1 ranked Northwestern Mutual advisor as compared to her peers in the Western Region of the United States. She was #2 in 2017 & 2019, and was ranked #7, nationally, in 2018. She works with her clients at every stage of life, helping them to understand both their needs and their potential. Her specialty is in working with sales executives, physicians, tech professionals, and athletics coaches to find the solutions that work best for their unique needs.

Jodi Allen, Global Chief Marketing Officer

Behr Paint Company, Santa Ana

Jodi Allen joined Behr Paint Company in 2014 as the first global chief marketing officer bringing more than two decades of diverse experience from highly-competitive industries. Allen is responsible for all consumer marketing including brand, digital, social, creative services, visual merchandising, innovation and research & insights across all brands at Behr Paint Company. When Allen started at Behr Paint Company she created the first-ever integrated marketing department developing new marketing strategies and omni-channel campaigns resulting in the highest market share in the history of the company. She also launched the first social platforms and campaigns across all brands including BEHR, BEHR Pro, and KILZ resulting in the highest Share of Voice on Pinterest and above benchmark media performance on Instagram, Facebook and YouTube. By developing a licensing strategy for the company, Allen was also able to successfully launch a paint partnership with Magnolia Home by Joanna and Chip Gaines from HGTV's #1 show Fixer Upper.

Courtney Aloviz, Owner

Sugar 'n Spice, Balboa Island

Courtney Aloviz co-owns Balboa Island's iconic Sugar 'n Spice shop. As the original frozen banana shop, founded in 1945, the beloved sweet treat destination is celebrating its 75th Anniversary this year. Prior to taking the helm at Sugar 'n Spice, Aloviz spent nearly 25 years in Hollywood, glamping up TV stars, models and movie moguls such as Donny Osmond (she was his personal makeup artist for 7 years) Greg Kinnear, Brooklyn Decker, Jerry Seinfeld, Jason Alexander, and Shannon Elizabeth. Not to mention she was an in-demand makeup artist for popular shows like The Voice, General Hospital, Days of Our Lives, and various other shows on ABC, NBC, and CBS. Today, she finds so much fulfillment in bringing the Sugar 'n Spice experience to locals and vacationers alike, not only through their location on Balboa Island, but via their catering truck and contactless delivery solutions that recently launched.

Priscilla Alvarado, Accounting Supervisor, Craft Services

Swinerton, Irvine

Priscilla Alvarado has been instrumental in building and developing the entire Craft Services Support team for Swinerton company-wide. She always invests time and effort into training and developing her teammates and making sure they have what they need to be successful. Swinerton utilizes Workday, an on-demand financial management, human resources and planning software. Alvarado has been critical to optimizing Workday for Swinerton's admin and craft employees. Her willingness and ability to dive in and figure things out has been vital to getting Workday to where it is today. She is solutions-oriented and always focused on how to move forward even in the face of numerous challenges. She embodies the phrase, "Where there's a will, there's a way!" She can execute on many fronts all at once and still achieves results within the time she commits to.

Tamara Anderson, Founder/Event Director

Culinary and Cannabis, Irvine

Culinary and Cannabis founder Tamara Anderson, an Irvine resident, opened her life up to cannabis through her late son's battle with a rare genetic condition. The discovery of cannabis as a viable option during his health battle allowed Anderson to dedicate her life to educating the general public about the potential health benefits of incorporating cannabis into a person's daily life. This especially includes those dealing with significant pain or those who are struggling to find helpful, natural options. As a registered nurse, she created the Culinary and Cannabis concept which focuses on health, wellness and education through alternative uses of legal cannabis by means other than smoking. This idea brings together health care professionals and advocacy groups along with food and drink experts within the community for special events. These gatherings aim to remove the stigma associated with medical marijuana treatments by exploring its many culinary possibilities. Under Anderson's leadership, Culinary and Cannabis has previously hosted events around large-scale gatherings like the Academy Awards, the Grammys, the ESPYs and Coachella Music Festival and, most recently, produced the Halloween Soiree in October 2019. Learning how to cook with cannabis, incorporating luxurious skincare products and immersive spa treatments are a few of the creatively paired medical ideas and culinary concepts that others have enjoyed.

Corinne Anderson Schoepe, Director, Global Brand

Fluidmaster, San Juan Capistrano

Corinne Anderson's career trajectory and contributions to the higher levels of the organization have skyrocketed within her nine years at Fluidmaster. She started in finance, rotated through the various disciplines, and spent the majority of time in financial planning and analysis. She later moved to marketing, where she successfully launched the Perfect Fit tank lever line, which was the fastest new product development project completed at the company over the past decade and is now a $4 million line. She instituted a brand management discipline, creating standards and guidelines as well as completely overhauling all global packaging in less than a year. She has oversight of the European marketing activities and product launches. She also drives the strategic brand direction globally and international business development and co-leads strategic planning. She is also actively promoting a culture of collaboration and innovation. On top of all of that, she also sits on the board of Fluidmaster.

Your success inspires — your determination empowers

We are proud to celebrate all the achievements of women past, present, and future. When women succeed, everybody wins.

Madi Solutions LLC, Brea

Madi Basu's entrepreneurial debut was rooted in her steadfast passion for nature, a clean and healthy environment and sustainable living. Being inspired and motivated by other dedicated entrepreneurs' philosophies and biographies, Basu seeded the company in 2017. Ever since then, and being a small part of the vast and growing green economy, she has been working very hard to promote and provide better and sustainable product choices in the USA. Basu started her career at Export Import Bank, and spent her first couple of formative years learning the ropes of best practices in global trade, international logistics and supply chain. Subsequently, she consulted in procurement, manufacturing, customer relationship management and financials for a number of years. Madi Solutions' commitment toward sustainability goes much beyond promoting earth-friendly sustainable products within the USA. The company places a lot of importance on research, and is at the forefront in innovating newer and better sustainable choices for consumers.

Ashley Bleckner, Certified Financial Planner/Advisor Ellevest, Capistrano Beach

Ashley Bleckner established Ellevest's thriving Southern California presence and contributed to the rollout of Ellevest Intentional Impact Portfolios — a way for Ellevest Private Wealth clients to invest their money in companies that meet Ellevest's criteria for doing the right things by women - and redirecting their money away from companies with products, policies, and practices that may harm them. Her mission, put simply, is to get more money in the hands of women - both by helping them take financial control, and by giving them innovative social impact investing options so they can use their assets to power real change. Bleckner and the team continue to innovate the financial services industry, after hearing from many women (and seeing the data to back it up) that the current investment industry wasn't serving them. Since Bleckner was recruited by Ellevest to spearhead their Southern California presence, she's built a robust book of powerful women clients (and their allies), hosted several educational events alongside Ellevest CEO Sallie Krawcheck, and leveraged her expertise and enthusiasm as a Certified Financial Planner to give back to the community.

Amber Bonasoro, Director of Marketing

Berkshire Hathaway HomeServices California Properties, Newport Beach

Amber Bonasoro oversees the marketing, development, and creative direction of Berkshire Hathaway HomeServices California Properties. With annual sales of $12 billion and 3,000+ agents, the company is internationally recognized as a Berkshire Elite Brokerage. Leslie Calhoun, President/CEO

Optivest Inc., Dana Point

Early in her 13-year career history with Optivest, Leslie Calhoun eagerly took increasing responsibility until she was independently operating the company. She spent the remaining years being mentored by the founder learning the nuances of business development, vetting investments, providing solid financial advice and offering diversified and durable investment portfolios to high net-worth families nationwide. On December 31, 2018, Calhoun bought the firm from the retiring founder and is now sole owner of Optivest, Inc. which manages over $500 million of client assets. Calhoun represents a double minority, being both a female financial advisor and a female financial industry CEO. A priority for Calhoun was to preserve the firm's culture of caring deeply for the staff of the company who make it possible for the firm to serve its clients. She also wanted to preserve the values on which the firm was established; that Optivest exists to serve others and thereby donates the first 10 percent of gross revenues to the Optivest Foundation, a 501(c)3 which supports charitable initiatives worldwide.

Rita Carter, Studio Principal, Higher Education Practice

Little, Newport Beach

Erin Darafeev, President

IMD Furniture, Garden Grove

Erin Darafeev comes from a generational family of furniture makers. You could say she has sawdust in her veins, breathes design, and is one of the last true furniture makers in the USA. Having grown up in the furniture business, stepping in to lend a hand came naturally. She worked alongside her family in their Southern California manufacturing plants while also continuing her education in mechanical engineering, business, and art. Prior to working in furniture design and manufacturing operations, Darafeev spent 15 years working in marketing, sales, and business consulting for small businesses, non-profit and political organizations. In early 2018, Darafeev ventured out on her own to form IMD Furniture and purchased the assets and rights to the IM David brand from the Ginsberg family. The 54-year-old American business has always had a solid reputation for building long-lasting consumer and commercial grade hospitality furniture, with a dealer network spanning the lower 48 states. With a renewed vision, passion, drive and commitment, the tradition of building high-quality, custom hardwood dining and game room furniture will continue to flourish in Southern California for decades to come.

Gail Lynch, Founder

Mutt Lynch's, Newport Beach
Founded by Gail and her husband Dan Lynch in 1975, Mutt Lynch's in Newport Beach is one of Orange County's most iconic beach bars. The award-winning restaurant is located just steps away from the sand on the Newport boardwalk. As Gail enters her 45th year in business, she looks to continue and expand upon the success she's built over the past four and a half decades - including expanding to a second location in 2020. Gail and husband Dan Lynch opened the original Mutt Lynch's location near the ferry dock on the Balboa Peninsula - naming it after Dan's father Emmett Lynch, who was affectionately given the nickname "Mutt" when he served in the Army during World War 1. In 1982, a fire originating in the hotel above left her dream in ruins. Later that year, they were able to relocate to their current location on the oceanfront boardwalk of the Newport Beach Pier. Somehow, the wooden bar from the original location survived the fire and is the focal point of their bustling beach bar today.

Kristina Rovirosa, Vice President Quality Management

LIBERTY Dental Plan, Irvine

Kristina Rovirosa, Registered Nurse & US Army Sergeant Veteran, joined LIBERTY Dental Plan in October 2018. Within weeks of joining the company, she was utilizing her ability to work calmly under pressure that she had mastered while participating in Operation Iraqi Freedom II (OIF) in Fallujah Iraq. She worked with the team to establish a comprehensive quality program to improve interdepartmental communications, structure critical committees to report to the board of directors and improve the overall workflow. Rovirosa met with each team member, performed a SWOT analysis, created performance metrics setting a baseline and demonstrating projected growth. She outlined a future for the department that included achieving a full URAC Accreditation in less than one year. This made LIBERTY the second dental plan in the nation to achieve full accreditation. Rovirosa also used her nursing and quality management background to implement the first Dental Care Management Program for the State of Florida's Medicaid Program. This program targets the regions' most overlooked populations and introduces them to oral health care that can both save and change lives. The changes that Rovirosa made to the Quality Program resulted in the early identification of other issues involving housing, food and critical issues that can be reported to other state agencies and community partners to address.

In 2015, The National Association of Professional Women named Svoboda Woman of the Year for her outstanding leadership, professional achievements, and impact within the community.

Linda Talamo, Owner/Founder

Hera Hub Irvine, Irvine

In less than a year, Talamo has created a community and workspace that functions as a platform to bring women together to help each other connect, collaborate and grow their businesses. It serves to promote, advance and empower the dynamic women of OC. Talamo built her business from the ground up from the office build out, to the interior decorating, to promoting the business and filling the space. When people walk into the space they are instantly blown away by the amazing ambiance she has created. Hera Hub is a coworking space and business accelerator, where entrepreneurial women can create and collaborate in a professional, productive, spa-like environment. The platform provides members with connections to other business experts, one-on-one mentoring, access to weekly educational workshops, and visibility within the community, thus giving them the support they need to be prosperous.

Lynn Tanattanawin, Head of Corporate Strategy

Ephesoft, Irvine

Lynn Tanattanawin joined Ephesoft in 2018 as the head of corporate strategy, through an introduction by a Board member to the CEO, Ike Kavvas. Her ability to think strategically, drive operational rigor and her inherent traits of tenacity and positive energy are clear to everyone throughout the organizations and is confirmed by Ephesoft's CEO who depends on her acute insight and guidance. Tanattanawin's work is often behind the scenes, but the achievement and impact is widespread. She manages the Board, leads investor relations, M&A, IP strategy and global market intelligence. She travels frequently to learn about the industry and new technologies (especially AI, digital transformation and enterprise productivity), anticipating trends and providing guidance on how to take advantage of market shifts. Her influence spans across the organization with her hands in every department, making sure the team runs in lockstep, while considering financial and organizational ramifications of each move.

Jinger Tapia, Principal, Design

Most recently, she created Deloitte's Women on Boards program that educates and promotes women's leadership on corporate boards. She also leads the OC Inclusion Council.

Kristen Thibeault, Founder & Chief Culinary Officer

Nybl, Anaheim

At the crux of Nybl's explosive growth is Kristen Thibeault's development of proprietary dishes designed to fuel peak performance. Chef has developed an unmatched menu catalog of 1,000 recipes and 150 global menu themes, all of which avoid the use of gluten, dairy and refined sugars, and is constantly innovating with new themes introduced monthly. Nybl is the first of this scale to execute healthy meals without sacrificing variety or flavor, all while keeping prices competitive. Nybl owns the entire process from locally sourcing, to production, to delivery, and on-site services. Nybl has also developed, Mise, its own proprietary software that orchestrates the production, delivery, and presentation of up to 6,000 meals per day across all markets. This software currently hosts the client profiles of approximately 100 companies and sports teams, each with specific dietary needs and restrictions for their workforce. Because of her style of cooking, Thibeault's client list is chalk full of the world's top performers including The Dodgers, The Golden State Warriors, Anaheim Ducks, New England Patriots, SF Giants, Astros, The Red Sox, Amazon, DocuSign, Virgin Orbit and BuzzFeed. Chef Thibeault is the only chef in the world that can say she served four world champion teams at the same time: NFL, MLB, NBA and Rugby World Cup.

Melanie Thomas, Senior Vice President and Partner

Burnham Benefits, Irvine

Melanie Thomas recently celebrated her 20 year anniversary with Burnham Benefits. Starting off as a customer service representative in the service department, she worked her way up to becoming an equity partner halfway through her time at Burnham. Her biggest achievement is starting from a ground zero and having the opportunity to contribute and work her way towards becoming a partner. Thomas was instrumental in pioneering the Burnham Way, which is the Burnham's philanthropy division. This committee within the company raises awareness about volunteering opportunities, financial support, in-kind donations, event participation and educates the staff on the multitude of ways they can focus their time and energy on meaningful, philanthropic efforts. Thomas has always focused on building strong, lasting business relationships and has one of the most impressive client retention rates - many of her clients have been with her for over 20 years! Providing a comprehensive array of services, Thomas has assisted clients with creating and implementing robust wellness program solutions and disease management programs around conditions like diabetes. She also has worked closely with clients on mergers and acquisitions from everything from financial impacts, implementations and migrations, and employee communications. Over the years, Thomas has helped employees overcome financial burdens with claim appeals and mismanagement of contract language.

Anh Tran, Partner/ Estate Planning Attorney

JanHobbs Financial Group/ Modern Wealth Law, Orange

Anh Tran is currently Partner at JanHobbs Financial Group and Estate Planning Attorney at Modern Wealth Law. With JanHobbs Financial Group, Tran advises high net worth individuals, families, and business owners on all aspects of financial planning, retirement planning and estate planning. As a certified financial planner and a professional with estate planning experience, Tran is in a position to advise her clients on a wide variety of wealth management issues. In the past year, Tran has been named Forbes Top 250 Women Wealth Advisor and Forbes Top Next Generation Wealth Advisors.

Additionally, she has been featured in Super Lawyers Magazine for the last seven years (2014 - 2020) and spoke to her colleagues at the 2019 30 Under 30 Conference. She is also actively involved with collective giving organization, Impact Giving and serves as a board member.

Jade Tran, Partner

Wood, Smith, Henning & Berman LLP, Aliso Viejo

Jade Tran is a celebrated trial lawyer who is nationally recognized for her success in the courtroom. She has fueled growth in the Orange County office of WSHB, a firm where she worked during law school and enjoyed promotions throughout the year from associate to managing partner. Her litigation prowess is widely sought out by clients who trusted Tran to take to verdict six high profile cases in the last year alone, one of which was selected as one of the top 100 verdicts for 2018. For these trials, she achieved outright defense verdicts, or in cases of admitted liability, was able to limit the verdicts to less than 10% of the ask from opposing parties. For the businesses that were on the receiving end of these lawyers, Tran's legal prowess provided stability and vindication in an emotionally charged environment that could have easily hit the bottom lines of many companies. She resolved countless claims throughout Orange County and is known for many as the "go to" lawyer for small, mid-size and large businesses. At the same time, she provided risk management practice pointers to not only these businesses but others on strategies to avoid litigation in the first instance. Orange Counties businesses who have entrusted Tran, thrive thanks to her guidance. She is a fierce advocate for Diversity and Inclusivity, and she herself was honored as one of the "Nation's Best" by the Lawyers of Color.

Jenny Tran, Senior Associate

Brown & Streza LLP, Irvine

Jenny Tran's 17-year tenure at Brown & Streza, LLP commenced in 2003 when she started off working as a File Clerk. She was the first associate at Brown & Streza, LLP to ever be hired right out of law school in 2010, just one year after the Great Recession. Since then, she has risen through the ranks to become a senior associate. She provides training and guidance to staff and Paralegals, supports the development of other Associates, and mentors staff in their career advancement. Tran has also established a network of highly esteemed trusted advisors that meet on a quarterly basis at Brown & Streza, LLP to facilitate and foster community, collaboration, and opportunity. For seven straight years in a row, she has been recognized as a Rising Star by SuperLawyer.

Janie Tsao, Co-Founder

Miven Inc., Newport Beach

Janie Tsao co-founded Linksys in 1988 and operated the business from her garage for the first few years. She eventually led the company in developing and opening distribution channels for a full line of tech hardware as the company introduced network devices and then wireless routers into the marketplace. Tsao's ability to identify emerging business opportunities coupled with her flexibility and dynamic leadership was instrumental in bringing the internet sharing into homes and small businesses everywhere. Her sales and marketing foresight positioned Linksys as the leader in wireless routers and positioned the company for its eventual acquisition by Cisco Systems in 2003. Tsao and her husband have been recognized as the entrepreneurs of the year 2004 by Inc Magazine. Women transform technology, AnitaB.org, awarded Janie Tsao as the recipient of women of vision award for leadership in 2005. Tsao was instrumental in establishing retail channels and creating hundreds of jobs in Orange County.

2020 Women in Business Award Nominees

Rachel Valentine, Head of People Operations

Vincit, Irvine

During her time with the company, she doubled the employee headcount, and contributed to the successful focus on company culture and employee happiness which resulted in Vincit being recognized as a Best Place to work by the Orange County Business Journal, TopWorkplace by the OC Register and nod at Best Tech Work Culture by Tech in Motion. She also spearheaded the company move into its new headquarters location in Irvine Spectrum and is supporting their office expansion plans for the next five years. Heading up Vincit's People Operations, she continues to support hiring, on-boarding and on-going support of all team members. She is the driving force behind many of Vincit's community initiatives including partnerships with local schools, nonprofits and runs Vincit Dev Talks, a quarterly event hosting speakers from local OC Tech firms discussing the latest trends of the industry.

Patricia Wallace, Founder of OC Pelvic Wellness, Director of Pelvic Health and Wellness for Mission Hospital, Owner of The Advanced Center for Pelvic Medicine & Reconstructive Surgery

The Advanced Center for Pelvic Medicine & Reconstructive Surgery, Mission Hospital

Dr. Patricia Wallace came to work at the Center formally known as the Incontinence and Pelvic Support Institute after her three-year fellowship in Female Pelvic Medicine and Reconstructive Surgery and after serving as a Professor at UCI Medical School for six years. Her energy and focus allowed the Center to grow and build a holistic and individualized approach to women's pelvic health. She was instrumental in the changing of the name of the practice, developing patient informational materials on all pelvic health topics, recruiting new providers, and aligning the practice mission with that of the needs of the community. She became an owner in 2011. Dr. Wallace has been a leader in South Orange County for women's health for more than 10 years. Her business accomplishments include owning and growing a private practice in women's health in a healthcare environment that is largely now owned by large hospital systems. She founded her personal corporation and brand OC Pelvic Wellness and continues to work on building the platform and social awareness of women's pelvic health.

Carolina Weidler, Project Director

H. Hendy Associates, Newport Beach

Carolina Weidler is an architect, Lean Six Sigma Black Belt and LEED AP professional with domestic and international experience creating process-driven environments for high-tech corporations. She currently represents a small group in the nation - 22% - of reported females with a Certified Six Sigma Black Belt. In an industry dominated by men, Weidler's Six Sigma Black Belt uniquely positions her in the local architecture and design world and provides businesses with unmatched expertise needed to deliver high-performance workplace environments. Weidler has helped clients reimagine spaces - from food processing factories to aircraft assembly lines - ranging from 2,000 to 470,000 square feet. She was hired by Hendy, a national interior architect firm, to lead the company's Science and Technology Studio. This new division was created to support California's growing need for efficient and effective workplace environments in science, technology, engineering and math-based industries - a highly specialized area of the commercial real estate industry.

Jessica Welch, Vice President of Operations

Greater Irvine Chamber of Commerce, Irvine

Jessica Welch began her career in the Chamber industry in 2007 with the Greater Irvine Chamber as executive assistant to the president & CEO, working closely with the board of directors, and executive and governmental affairs committees. In 2012, she was promoted to programs director for which additional responsibilities included managing events generating over 30% of the annual budget. In 2017, Welch was promoted to senior director of operations, and in 2018 to vice president of operations. Providing guidance on the strategic plan and governance of the chamber, her role on the chamber's executive management team is fundamental to the organization's everyday operations. She oversees and manages annual budgets for operations, administration, programs, and events-which holds five signature and 30 networking events a year-and membership, including high-level investor relations and partnerships. Welch is responsible for talent recruitment, staff development, and human resource coordination.

Genevieve West, Director of Healthcare Services

Howard Building Corporation, Costa Mesa

Prior to her arrival in 2016, Howard Building Corporation (HBC) focused primarily on corporate and professional tenant improvement projects with no cohesive trajectory towards healthcare real estate. With the wealth of knowledge that Genevieve West brought with her, she has since woven HBC's services into the fabric of Orange County's healthcare development while strengthening relationships between the real estate and healthcare sectors. The result has been the streamlined completion of several major facilities and continued success during the rise of patient-centered healthcare. Funneling her passion for real estate management into the healthcare industry has had resounding effects that extend beyond her success at HBC and into the greater community.

Charlotte Wiederholt, President

Studio Other, Newport Beach

Ali Woodward, Executive Director

Fristers, Irvine
Ali Woodward is the founder, president and CEO of Fristers, an Orange County-based nonprofit dedicated to helping teenage parents thrive. In 2008, driven by her own experience with teen pregnancy, and seeing a lack of services for teenage mothers, Woodward sought to address this deficit and bring support to this vulnerable population. Under her leadership, Fristers developed comprehensive programming for young mothers, expanded to include programs and services for children, fathers, and teen parent couples, and established three city chapters. She also created a strategic network of community partners to meet the families' needs. Since inception, Fristers has impacted more than 2,000 teen parents and children. Young parents are graduating high school, enrolling in college and vocational training, securing employment, building healthy relationships, and learning how to be successful parents. Children are receiving early intervention services that are improving their developmental, social, and educational gains.

Erica Zuniga, Principal

SAA Interiors + Architecture, Irvine

Erica Zuniga has been a loyal professional with SAA for 18 years where she worked hard to advance from her entry level position to principal within 10 years. Zuniga has achieved professional achievement through hard work and dedication to the design and real estate business. During her tenure she has managed the firms' most important clients and projects. Her humble application of her expertise and knowledge, paired with her approachable persona, have earned her the title of a respected advisor to her clients, colleagues, partners and peers. She strives to make each encounter meaningful, with the goal of elevating the spirit of those around her. Zuniga is the first female in her family to graduate college. She moved from a small, rural town in Indiana to California to pursue a career in Interior Design in a vibrant, urban environment. As a young woman in a male dominated industry, she worked hard to prove her value at the table. She quickly achieved success in the community and has earned her position as Principal at SAA. Striving for excellence and continuing education, she secured her CID and LEED certification while serving a leadership role with the firm and raising a family.

Each time a woman stands up for herself, without knowing it possibly, without claiming it, she stands up for all women.”
