“It’s in my blood to roll up my sleeves and do what needs to be done.”

From German settlers dating back to the foundation of Texas to a grandmother who welded Navy ships during WWII, the strong women in Alison Sewell’s family have served to mold her infectious can-do spirit. In real estate, as in life, she’s courageous and steadfast in the pursuit of her goals. The determinism that has driven the women of her family for generations is alive and well today. Failure has simply never been an option. As a proud sixth-generation Texan, Alison has a deep connection to the Lone Star State that stretches back nearly 200 years. Her ancestors arrived in Texas in the 1830s, so it’s no surprise she has a passion for helping others make Texas their home. A Greater Houston real estate leader for 17 years, Alison specializes in all facets of in-town living. From high rises to meticulous historical renovations, there simply is no more diverse a knowledge base than what Alison can bring to bear for her clients.

Alison describes her lifestyle as half city/half country. We are in Texas after all! As a horsewoman and equestrian competitor, it seemed only natural to include that sector in her real estate career. Her expanded portfolio includes acreage, farm/ranch and exquisite horse properties. Following her passion for horses, Alison also focuses her philanthropic endeavors in the therapeutic horseback riding arena. “From veterans with PTSD to those with mental or physical challenges, being on the back of an animal is incredibly healing for the mind and soul,” she says. To Alison, success is finding what brings you happiness and making that your life’s work. Nowhere is that more evident than where these two worlds have come together.
