Presenting Constellation 167, the first residence designed by world-renowned and widely published Eric Owen Moss, known for his experimental and daring commercial architectural endeavors. Its peculiar yet arrestingly addictive design is a love letter to the geometry that exists in nature and life itself, a genius vision that is unmissable and unmatched the globe over. The home feels alive, or that it at least must be a treasured relic of some future moment in space time. Its smooth, sugary concrete exterior angles and curves to ultimately converge atop a beautiful dome pointed towards the heavens. Reconstructed by its current owner, the home underwent a years-long restoration and structural reconstruction that included the addition of a lush lagoon with lap pool and a full-property water drainage and pump system. Inside, light delicately travels throughout the industrial space as it gently dances across every surface, from the soft terrazzo flooring to burnished steel and mahogany. To exist here is to realize a process of never-ending discovery, the home gradually revealing fresh, picture-perfect moments to its inhabitants and their guests. A majestic haven for the true creative mind; a museum-quality showplace to spark imagination and enliven the senses.
