The Druckman Residence, designed by Rudolph Schindler in 1941, is a rare modernist home in the Hollywood Hills' Outpost Estates. Preserving Schindler's original vision, the house features open-plan living with soaring beamed ceilings, clerestory windows, and an original fireplace. The renovated kitchen includes marble countertops, pink cabinetry, and high-end appliances, while the home offers three bedrooms, an office/den, and three updated bathrooms in period colors. Large windows fill the space with natural light and connect seamlessly to a landscaped garden and oval pool. Recent upgrades include a new roof, HVAC, plumbing, electrical, tankless water heater, and enhanced privacy with a new gate and security system - blending classic design with modern comfort.
