A 12-bedroom mega compound in Los Angeles with some of the most over-the-top amenities to ever be found in a private residence has returned to the market with a near $40 million price chop—more than three years after it was initially listed for the sky-high price of $139 million.

Dubbed La Fin (or The End), the "once-in-a-lifetime Bel-Air estate" is reportedly owned by Joe Englanoff, a former emergency room director.

Despite its newly discounted listing price of $99.95 million, the property—which is described as the "pinnacle of lavish splendor" and boasts "remarkable amenities"—has still sparkled its way to the top of the week's most expensive homes list with an ask of more than $20 million over any other home featured.

Eye-popping highlights include a spiral staircase surrounding a 44-foot chandelier made with 55,000 crystals, and a lavish primary suite with lounge area, coffee bar, dual walk-in closets, and private terrace with spa, firepit, and TV.

Other opulent amenities include a 6,000-square-foot entertainment level with custom bar, 1,000-bottle wine cellar, cigar lounge, vodka tasting room, a fitness center with rock climbing wall, a soundproof cinema, and an "automated six-car vehicle elevator display."

Outdoors, the 2.08-acre property offering panoramic city views also features an infinity pool with rising 23-foot LED screen, and a roof deck with built-in seating, fire table, and "elevated spa." There are also staff residences and a detached guest suite.

Price: $68,000,000

Accepts crypto: This stunning nine-bedroom spec house originally hit the market in 2022 for $72.5 million.

The shimmering pad, which is now offered for an estimated monthly mortgage of $419,229, boasts unbelievable resort-style amenities, including an illuminated European-inspired wine room, a "command center-style office," a screening room, a fitness center, hookah and mediation lounges, a panic room, and even a shoeshine station.

The primary retreat has a 1,500-square-foot terrace, reading vestibule, dual dressing rooms, and twin soaking tubs.

Located on nearly 1 acre, the property surrounded by breathtaking skyline and canyon views also boasts a sunken firepit, infinity pool, 30-person spa, and sand volleyball court.

Sally Forster Jones of COMPASS, Tomer Fridman and Aaron Kirman of Christie's International Real Estate Souther California, Josh Altman of Douglas Elliman, and Nicole Plaxen and Shauna Walters of Sotheby's International Realty are the listing agents.

1. 1200 Bel Air Rd, Los Angeles, CA

Price: $99,950,000

La Fin: Here's the chance to "experience the pinnacle of lavish splendor" at this over-the-top mega compound that has once again returned to the market with a dramatic price chop.

Originally listed for $139 million in 2022, the 12-bedroom estate sits on a 2.08-acre lot offering unobstructed views of the city. A dramatic glass entry opens up to a spiral staircase surrounding a eye-catching 44-foot crystal chandelier.

Other impressive details include a custom stone bar, a hand-carved fireplace, custom-made furniture, and motorized pocket doors that lead to a deck surrounding an infinity-edge pool with rising 23-foot LED screen.

Astonishing amenities include a 30-person lounge area with firepit, a 6,000-square-foot entertainment level with bar, commercial-grade catering facilities, a vodka tasting room, and cigar lounge. There are also dedicated staff accommodations and detached guest suite.

Buyers should note the seller accepts crypto, according to the listing.

The property is listed with seven different agents: Sally Forster Jones of COMPASS, Tomer Fridman and Aaron Kirman of Christie's International Real Estate Southern California, Nicole Plaxen and Shauna Walters of Sotheby's International Realty, and Jacob Greene and Josh Altman of Douglass Elliman.
