NORTH MIAMI BEACH

In 1881, Captain William H. Fulford navigated his Coast Guard vessel away from the churning Atlantic and into the calm waters of what was then called Big Snake Creek. Where the open sea raged, here was stillness: mangroves filtering sunlight, wildlife moving through the shallows, a rhythm that felt untouched. He saw what others had missed. Not just shelter, but potential.

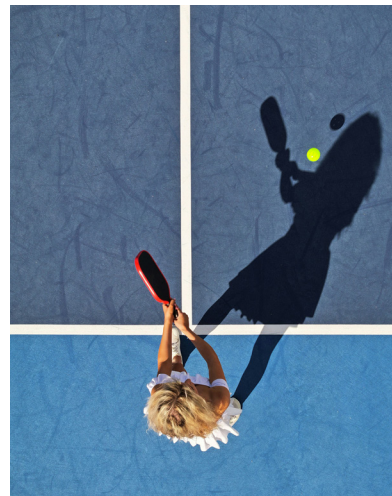

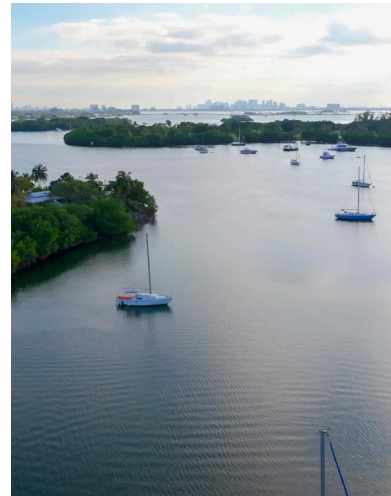

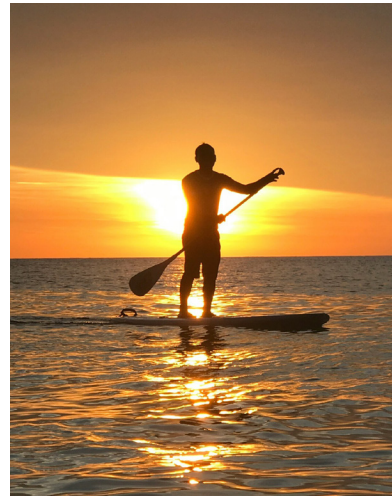

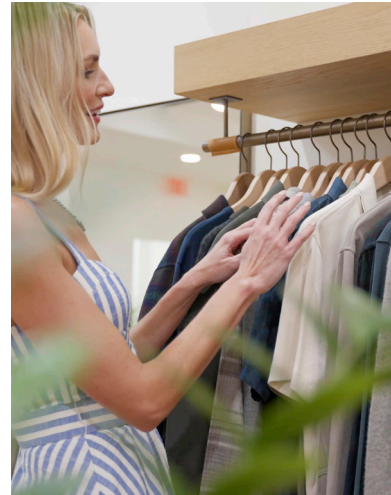

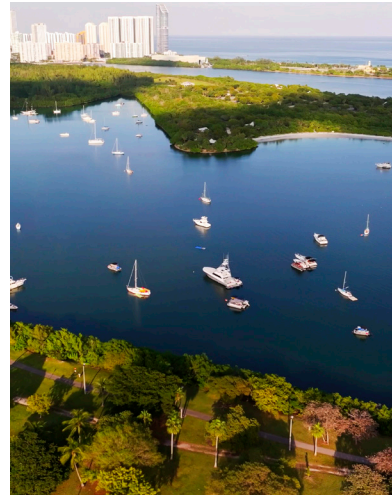

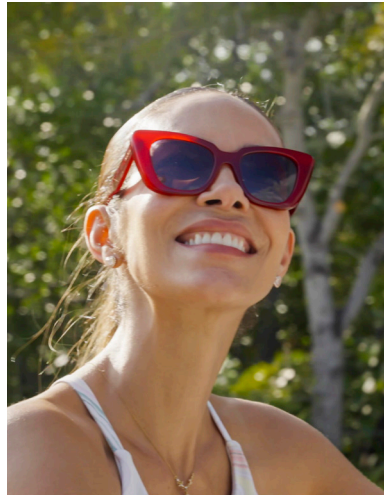

By 1897, Fulford had claimed 160 acres through the Homestead Act, a land patent signed by President Cleveland himself. He built a homestead of natural coral rock while settlers established farms along the river's eastern banks. When Henry Flagler extended the Florida East Coast Railway to Miami in 1896, the first wave of real growth arrived.

The 1920s transformed everything. Developer Lafe Allen envisioned a "perfect city" with wide boulevards and planned neighborhoods. The Fulford-by-the-Sea Company sold lots as fast as they could survey them. A radio station broadcast from Central Park. Carl Fisher built a wooden speedway, imagining this as the winter racing capital of the world. Then the hurricane of 1926 ended the boom overnight, leveling the speedway and scattering dreams across the marsh.

But the community proved resilient. Residents incorporated as the Town of Fulford in 1927, later renamed North Miami Beach.

That same pioneering character lives on at The William: independent, forward-looking, and unafraid to see possibility where others see only what already exists.

There is a particular quality of light in North Miami Beach that photographers chase and residents come to know intimately. It arrives early, golden and unhurried, spilling across balconies and through floor-to-ceiling windows before the city fully wakes. By evening, it transforms again, painting the sky in gradients of coral and violet as the sun drops behind the Oleta River's mangrove canopy.

The William exists at the intersection of these moments. Rising 26 stories above one of Miami's most connected neighborhoods, The William understands the difference between living somewhere and truly belonging to a place. The architecture, conceived by Carlos Ott and Behar Font, draws the eye upward with a distinctive louvered facade that speaks to both privacy and openness. Inside, Urban Robot's interiors balance warmth with sophistication, creating spaces that feel collected rather than decorated.

Two floors of amenities support the full spectrum of modern life, from rooftop pickleball to poolside retreats to co-working lounges with skyline views. Oleta River State Park begins minutes away. Aventura and Bal Harbour sit just down the road.

This is a building designed for people who want to be part of a neighborhood that is still writing its story, connected to everything Miami offers yet grounded in a vision entirely its own.

POOL & SUN DECK

The resort-style pool and sun deck create an escape without leaving home, where morning coffee by the water gives way to afternoon gatherings and evening conversations that stretch long into the Miami night.

Morning matches give way to afternoon escapes. Two floors of amenities offer endless ways to spend your day.

OUTDOOR BAR & POOL

Vacation without the travel. The poolside bar anchors lazy weekend afternoons and spontaneous after-work escapes. Order a drink, claim a lounger, and let the Miami sun remind you why you chose to live here. This is resort-style living, every single day.

FIRE-PIT LOUNGE

Where afternoons drift into unforgettable evenings. The outdoor bar serves as your social anchor while firepit seating creates intimate circles for conversation. Hammocks beckon for quieter moments, and lush landscaping softens the boundary between built and natural.

MULTI-PURPOSE CLUBROOM

A space that adapts to the moment. The multi-purpose clubroom moves effortlessly from morning coffee to game night, from casual conversation to celebration. Multiple seating zones accommodate groups of every size, while the integrated bar makes entertaining feel effortless.

CO-WORKING LOUNGE & LIBRARY

Leave your apartment but stay home. The co-working lounge blends professional workspace with inspiring views. Private working booths handle focused calls, communal tables welcome creative sessions, and the terrace offers fresh air when new ideas need room to breathe.

FITNESS CENTER

Our Fitness Center is designed to be your ultimate sanctuary for health and high performance, featuring state-of-the-art cardio, strength, and free weight equipment in a light-filled space where sweeping bay views become part of your routine.

INTERACTIVE KIDS PLAYROOM AND PLAYGROUND

A world designed just for them. The interactive kids playroom sparks imagination with creative play zones, climbing features, and space to be wonderfully loud. When energy needs an outlet, the adjacent playground offers fresh air and age-appropriate equipment, all while parents stay comfortably close.

PICKLEBALL COURT AND COURTSIDE GAMES ROOM

Watch the action from courtside or shift to board games and conversation—the gathering space where rooftop community naturally happens.

SUNSET LOUNGE

Comfortable lounge seating facilitates spontaneous gatherings, providing the perfect backdrop for afternoons that drift into unforgettable evenings.

CORAL LOUNGE

Reserve it for the moments that matter. The Coral Lounge offers a private, climate-controlled retreat for birthdays, anniversaries, family gatherings, or any celebration that deserves its own dedicated space. The indoor bar and flexible seating ensure every event feels perfectly yours.
