

Real Estate

Amanda Seyfried Lists $3.25 Million Condo, a Historic Lloyd Wright Lair Hits the Market, and Other Real Estate News

Here's everything you need to know now

By Dan Avery

April 13, 2022

From high-profile design commissions to exciting listings, there is always something new happening in the world of real estate. In this roundup, AD PRO has everything you need to know.

Milestones

A rendered interior at the Bentley Residences in Miami. Rendering courtesy of Bentley Residences

Bentley pulls up to Miami

Dezer Development has unveiled the first renderings of Bentley Residences, the metallic cylindrical tower on Miami's Sunny Isles Beach that will be the tallest on any U.S. beachfront when it's completed in 2026.

The carmaker's first residential property, the 60-story building was designed by Sieger Suarez in collaboration with Bentley designers Brett Boydell and Chris Cooke. Each of the 216 residences will include private pools on the balcony and a glass-enclosed car elevator (or “Dezervator”) that lets residents park on their floor.

RELEVANCE
INTERNATIONAL

Building amenities include a restaurant, whiskey bar, screening room, and a game room with V.R. headsets. Construction is set to start next year, with pricing between $4,200,000 and $7,500,000.

RELEVANCE
INTERNATIONAL