COLORADO, THEN AND NOW: A REAL ESTATE LEGACY BUILT BY THE SCHOSSOW GROUP

MERNE JUDSON

When Dale Schossow started out in real estate in 1979, daily life on the job meant driving handwritten contracts all over Denver, stopping at pay phones to stay in touch and having the latest MLS books to show inventory. Of course all of that can be done with a single device in your pocket these days but as Dale notes, “One constant remains: People buy homes and people sell homes, and each and every one has different needs and desires. It is still a people and ‘relationship’ business.”

In the five decades since his career began, Dale’s experience has led to a strong presence and portfolio of results in sought-after communities such as Ravenna, BackCountry, Highlands Ranch, Cherry Hills, Castle Pines, and surrounding South Metro neighborhoods. His legacy of honesty, preparation, and long-term relationships is carried forward by his son Nick’s modern leadership of The Schossow Group and the dedication of the entire team they have put together which includes seasoned agents April Stahl and Molly Petrelli, alongside newly added agent Josh Geist.

Together, they have built a culture where clients are known by name, stories matter, and outcomes are handled with care. In a modern world driven by automation, algorithms and AI, it’s this balance of experience, collaboration, and genuine connection that continues to make The Schossow Group one of Colorado’s most trusted real estate teams.

“We live, work and play in the areas our clients do and we share in their experiences. That will always be the separator,” Nick explains. “Technology and tools don’t mean anything if you don’t have the experience, empathy and devotion to serve your clients.”

In the fall of 2025, Molly helped a 91-year-old Vietnam veteran sell the Denver condo he had called home for nearly 50 years. With little local family support, she stepped in to help him thoughtfully prepare the home for listing—down to sitting beside him as they sorted through decades of mementos and war photographs.

“I had only known him for a week or two, yet there we were in his living room, reliving memories and honoring a lifetime,” Molly recalls. “It was incredibly emotional and tender. These aren’t just our clients’ homes—these are their lives. They hold stories, families, and legacies. We want to honor that responsibility and guide each person to what comes next—whether that means buying a first home, moving into a dream home, relocating, or beginning the next chapter of someone’s life.”

With Dale and Lindy's four children (Nick and April among them) and 13 grandchildren, plus Nick, April, Molly, and Josh each raising three kids of their own, the Schossow Group isn't just a family business—it's a team deeply rooted in Colorado. That family foundation shapes everything they do. Multiple generations living, growing, and thriving in the Denver area means the team is able to guide clients through every life stage with genuine insight into neighborhoods, schools, recreation, sports, culture and everything that makes a community feel like home.

"We're so passionate about what we do because it's our life," April shares, who brings 20+ years of real estate experience and hosts a BackCountry Run Club and is active at her church and in her kids' schools. "That authentic connection means we can serve from genuine, first-hand experience."

Chief among these communities is Ravenna in Littleton, where Dale has been particularly instrumental in the private golf community's development since 2005 – before the first ball was ever teed up. Both residents and club members at Ravenna Country Club enjoy breathtaking views of the surrounding landscape and the privacy and serenity that comes with the lifestyle there. Now a celebrated community of just over 200 luxury homes, the Schossows have sold more than 150 of the homes and homesites at Ravenna through the years, where their deep community involvement has made them not just friends, but trusted advisors for buyers and sellers alike. Outside of Ravenna, the team also serves the entire Denver area, specializing in Highlands Ranch, Littleton and Parker with the same commitment to exceptional care and advocacy for clients no matter the locale.

"We'll never chase a listing at the expense of doing what's truly best for our clients," says April. "I believe that combination of integrity with our experience is why clients come back to us and trust us with their friends and family."

The team's reputation for integrity and personalized service is reflected in the experiences of their clients. Jamie shared, "We had the most amazing experience working with the entire Schossow team! It was like working with family," while Carl wrote, "37 years and 18 transactions with Dale, that should tell you how we feel about the character and professionalism that is exhibited in The Schossow Group."

In a Colorado real estate market that continues to evolve, The Schossow Group stands apart for substance, service, and something that never goes out of style: trust.

"I like to deal with problems," Dale says. "Every transaction has some, but when presented with what seems to be an unsolvable issue or problem, I enjoy working it through to a successful end."

The Schossow Group is rooted in Colorado, trusted for generations, and poised to guide the next chapter of Colorado homeownership with the same integrity that built its name.

“Technology and tools don’t mean anything if you don’t have the experience, empathy and devotion to serve your clients.”

Michelle Leachman

TEACHING HER WAY TO THE TOP

BY CHRIS MENEZES
MERNE JUDSON

Michelle Leachman found real estate the same way she's found every calling in her life—by teaching her way into it. Education isn't just something she does. It's who she is. And it's the through line that carried her to becoming one of Denver's rising top producers in just two years.

Before real estate, Michelle was juggling more careers than most people consider in a lifetime. She taught science and business leadership at MSU Denver while also serving as a group fitness instructor at Lifetime, the Director of Education for Fit Bodies Inc., and a National Master Coach for Schwinn Cycling.

“My purpose in life is to educate,” she explains. “After buying my first home, I learned that there is so much opportunity to educate homebuyers to ensure they get the best home possible and are the most educated every step of the way.”

She purchased that first home excited for a light renovation, something similar to what she watched her mom do growing up in Idaho. But the project quickly turned into a full gut. That experience didn’t just open a door. It reframed her future. If education was the impact she wanted to make, real estate was the place to do it.

“I wanted to help people,” she adds simply. “Homebuying is one of the biggest purchases someone makes in their life. My purpose is to help educate and guide them every step of the way.”

Michelle earned her license in December 2023, started working with clients a month later and went under contract for the first time that March. By the end of her first full year, she had closed 35 transactions totaling $21.5 million in sales—enough to set the DMAR Rookie of the Year record for both highest volume and most closed transactions. This year, she pushed even further, finishing with 42 closings and earning recognition as a Top Zillow Premier Agent, which has made her a presenter at national and regional conferences throughout 2025.

What made Michelle so successful is that she didn’t pivot away from her past. She built on top of it. Even working on her personal home led her to purchasing additional full-flip projects that she, her husband and her mom are renovating together down to the fine details.

The reward for Michelle isn’t measured in sales volume or awards. It’s in what happens after the closing table. “Seeing so many clients take a house and make it home—that’s the feeling that can’t be beat,” she shares. Her phone fills with photos of renovations, decorated rooms and, sometimes, newborn babies. Clients become friends. Their milestones become shared joy.

But carrying that kind of heart also means carrying the weight when challenges surface. “Not taking everything personally,” she admits, has been her hardest lesson. Empathy makes her effective. It also makes the bumps feel sharper. Still, she continues to lean into the belief that every setback is a chance to grow stronger and show up better.

Success is the harmony between becoming who you strive to be and lifting up the people who matter most along the way.”

The Apollo Group has played a significant role in her success. As one of its six founding members, Michelle credits her mentor, Kris Caldwell, and her team for showing her what real leadership looks like. “I would not be where I am today if it weren’t for them,” she acknowledges.

Fast forward two years, she now finds herself on the other side in a leadership role—guiding new agents, answering questions, creating clarity and lifting others the way she was lifted. It’s a path she didn’t expect but has worked so hard to get to.

Outside work, Michelle stays active. She hikes, bikes, skis, renovates homes and once competed on Tracked, New Zealand’s version of Survivor. With a heart for animals, she supports the ASPCA and Best Friends Animal Society.

At home, she shares life with her husband Dan, her mom Joy—who now lives nearly next door—and their dog, Hobbes. Their first child is due in March, a milestone reshaping her definition of success.

Her advice for those coming up behind her is hard-earned:

“Find a team that both challenges you and elevates you. There will be failures, but who you have in your corner will make the world of difference. And above all, don’t let fear decide your path.”

When she thinks about what she wants to be remembered for, her answer is as steady as the rest of her story: “Making a difference in the lives of others.” It’s the teacher in her. The mentor. The mother-to-be. The REALTOR® who built a career on one belief—that education can change lives, and she can help people build a future they’re proud of.

Jameson Olsen & ALL MY SONS

Moving Lives Forward

When your clients reach moving day, the stakes are always high. After weeks or months of planning, they're placing everything they own in someone else's hands. That's why having the right partner matters — someone who sees the job as more than hauling boxes. Someone who understands they're moving lives. For REALTORS® across the country, that partner is All My Sons Moving & Storage, led by the unstoppable energy of Jameson Olsen, National Director of Marketing and Business Development.

For Olsen, the company's mission is deeply personal. Years ago, facing an abusive relationship and needing to leave quickly, she called five moving companies for help. Every answer was the same: no availability, too expensive, or simply no. Then she reached All My Sons. The operations manager listened, paused, and told her, "I don't know what I would do if I couldn't get to my daughter to help her — like your dad can't get to you now." Within 45 minutes, a team arrived. The only truck they had was an 18-wheeler, but they used it without hesitation to move her entire life to safety. Six years later, Olsen returned to the company — this time to build its brand and help it become a pillar in the communities it serves.

That same compassion still drives All My Sons today. Family-owned for more than 40 years, the company has grown to 93 locations nationwide — including four in Colorado — and still operates on one guiding principle: "Let our family move yours." Olsen's goal has been to elevate the moving experience and reshape how people view the industry, particularly within real estate. She treats her REALTORS® like family, showing up with creative co-branded marketing, social-media education, and sponsorship strategies designed to make their businesses stronger. She measures her success by the success of those she supports. "A key tenet of our business is helping other businesses grow," she says. "If we can do that, our business grows as a result. That's why I always approach people with my palm turned down, asking how I can help — not with my palm turned up."

Central to that philosophy is the All My Sons Ambassador Program, which allows referral partners to receive 7% back after a booked move is completed. Clients benefit too: they automatically receive the company's top-tier protection plan, which ensures that if something happens during the move, All My Sons will make it right. As well as developing their pay at closing program where customers can pay for their move from the proceeds of their home!

Olsen has also expanded the company's philanthropic footprint. Ten years ago, she launched the "Move With Us... For a Cure!" Pink Truck Program, wrapping the first truck in vivid pink to support breast-cancer awareness. Today, pink trucks roll across the country, turning heads and sparking conversations while raising awareness for a cause close to countless families.

Part of what sets All My Sons apart is its commitment to leadership. Once a manager completes training, they spend the first week working as a mover, no matter their role or background. For Olsen, this is non-negotiable. "How can you lead men and women when you've never been where they've been?" she asks. The result is a culture where leaders understand the job from the ground up. Making sure that the culture she has built at the locations she works with stays strong, Olsen frequently attends 6:00am dispatches to interact with the movers and to address certain important topics that arise.

Outside the moving world, Olsen pours her energy into youth sports — particularly youth flag football. A former multi-sport athlete and coach, she founded Hard Count Athletics, a national youth flag-football tournament circuit that has become a movement supporting young athletes, especially the rise of females in football. She partners with trailblazers like Dr. Jen Welter, the first female NFL coach, creating camps and opportunities that help girls see themselves on the field. "Everyone belongs on this field," she says, and she means it. Seeing young athletes light up when they meet her — some treating her like a role model — has become one of her favorite parts of the work.

Her connection to football extends well beyond youth programs. Olsen has become the mover NFL athletes trust. Agents from across the league — especially during the chaotic days around the draft — reach out to her directly to handle player relocations with speed, discretion, and care. It's not unusual for her phone to buzz late at night with a request from an agent. For these high-profile athletes, reliability matters, and Olsen has earned a reputation as the person who gets it done.

At its core, All My Sons is a family moving company with a national footprint — but with Olsen at the helm of marketing and partnerships, the company has become something more: a community supporter, a business ally, and a trusted resource for families in transition. Whether helping a REALTOR® build their brand, supporting a family through a tough move, or coordinating a relocation for an NFL star, Olsen brings the same philosophy to every interaction:

Compassion first. Service always. And a belief that moving isn't just a task — it's a responsibility.
