HISTORY

In 1664, 10 families migrated from Fairfield, Connecticut to settle the southern Westchester County Town of Eastchester. A deed was granted to the first settlers from Thomas Pell at the site of where the home of resident Anne Hutchinson had stood several decades prior. At the outbreak of the American Revolution, Eastchester was primarily a farming community until the arrival of the railroad in the 1840s. Eastchester, comprising approximately 5 square miles, is bordered on the north by Scarsdale, the south by Tuckahoe, to the east by New Rochelle and to the west by Yonkers.

TRANSPORTATION

Eastchester residents are blessed with an easy commute to New York City, which is approximately 30 minutes away via car or rail service (Scarsdale, Crestwood and Tuckahoe stations). Four airports (Laguardia, Westchester County, JFK International and Newark Liberty International) are less than an hour away from the Town of Eastchester.
