Richardson Development Reimagines 15 Foxtail Circle in Cherry Hills Village

*A comprehensive renovation brings architectural clarity, European materials, integrated technology, and a courtyard-centered point of view to an established
Buell Mansion residence*

CHERRY HILLS VILLAGE, Colo., Oct. 13, 2026. A comprehensively renovated residence in gated Buell Mansion has entered the market, offering a rare study in how established architecture can be renewed with discipline. Located at 15 Foxtail Circle, the six-bedroom, seven-bath home was reimagined by Richardson Development and is represented by Rachel Gallegos.

The renovation preserved the residence's substantial scale and architectural presence while reconsidering its materials, technology, storage, circulation, and daily function. The completed home offers 7,306 total square feet on a .41-acre homesite, an oversized four-car garage, and a central interior courtyard that organizes the living experience.

Custom cabinetry and millwork, natural stone, wide-plank hardwood, exposed beams, and elevated lighting create a cohesive visual language throughout the residence. Touchscreen smart-home controls, Sonos audio, upgraded surround sound, and dual HVAC bring modern capability into the architecture without overwhelming it.

A courtyard that defines the residence

At the center of the home, an interior courtyard offers covered outdoor living with a fireplace and fountain. The courtyard functions as an open-air room and an architectural anchor, connecting the surrounding interiors while bringing natural light, moving water, and protected outdoor space into the heart of the floor plan.

The main level includes formal living and dining spaces, a private office, front and rear powder rooms, and an expansive kitchen opening to the family room. Italian Saturnia travertine gives the kitchen a strong material presence, complemented by custom cabinetry, Thermador appliances, an ILVE gas range, a 48-inch double oven, under-cabinet lighting, and a dedicated chef's pantry.

Private spaces and entertainment designed as complete experiences

The upper-level primary suite includes a fireplace, private balcony, five-piece bath, and a custom California Closets walk-in closet. Heated bathroom floors, a bidet, and two handcrafted marble sinks from Italy bring distinctive craftsmanship to the suite. Three additional en-suite bedrooms and an upper-level laundry complete the floor.

The finished lower level extends the residence with two additional bedrooms, a second office with a dedicated mini-split, a movie theater with projector, a bar, wine cellar, private gym, and generous gathering spaces.

A renovation story grounded in restraint

“15 Foxtail Circle already had the architectural presence and scale,” said Rachel Gallegos. “Richardson Development respected those strengths and brought every layer of the home forward with clarity. The courtyard gives the residence its emotional center, while the renovation delivers the materials, technology, and function expected of modern luxury.”

Located within gated Buell Mansion in Cherry Hills Village, the residence includes access to community pool and tennis amenities and is served by Cherry Creek Schools. Showings are available upon request through Rachel Gallegos.
