15 Foxtail Circle

More than a renovation, 15 Foxtail represents a complete transformation—thoughtfully reimagined with an emphasis on craftsmanship, materiality and modern livability. From custom millwork and natural stone to integrated technology and spaces designed equally for everyday living and entertaining, every detail contributes to a home that feels sophisticated, intentional and effortless.

A transformation of this scale is rarely found within an established Cherry Hills Village residence. Here, the character, architectural presence and generous proportions of the original home are paired with the elevated finishes, modern systems and ease of a newly completed residence.

Spanning 7,306 total square feet on a .41-acre lot, 15 Foxtail offers 6 bedrooms, 7 bathrooms and an oversized four-car garage—a turnkey residence where established character and contemporary luxury come together beautifully.

Buell Mansion

Few names are as woven into Denver's architectural history as Temple Hoyne Buell. A celebrated architect and early city planner for Cherry Hills Village, Buell envisioned this enclave as something distinctly removed from the city —defined by expansive properties, open space and a quiet, rural character. His influence can still be felt throughout Cherry Hills Village today.

That vision carries forward within Buell Mansion, an exclusive 116-acre gated community offering a rare sense of privacy and seclusion in one of the Denver area's most distinguished residential settings. Gated entry, private roads, dedicated security and beautifully maintained grounds create an environment that feels remarkably tucked away, while community amenities include a private pool and tennis courts.

Beyond the gates, the surrounding parks, trails and open spaces of Cherry Hills Village invite walking, running and cycling through a landscape known for its mature trees, winding roads and pastoral character. It is a setting that offers the space and tranquility of a private retreat while remaining exceptionally connected to Cherry Creek and the greater Denver area.

15 Foxtail Circle sits at the heart of it all—a completely reimagined residence within a community where privacy, provenance and place come together in a way that is increasingly difficult to find.
